Proposal Supported In House Amounts To New OPA; Timing Appears Only Issue

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

A movement to give the President consumer rationing, price and wage controls—in addition to the allocation powers and credit restrictions he asked for—snowballed in Congress yesterday.

By the end of the day the issue appeared to be no longer merely whether the President should be granted the added power, but whether he should get it on a standby basis for later use, or whether he should be forced to apply it immediately.

'New OPA' Shapes in House

In the House, particularly, Republicans joined by some Democrats, seemed to be united behind a plan—to be voted on Wednesday—that would in effect institute a wage and price freeze, at once, at levels prevailing just before the Korean conflict. At the same time, it would establish what amounts to another OPA.

This measure is highly objectionable to the Administration, which considers it a booby trap, sure to result in more inequities than it corrects and virtually impossible to administer on such short notice. Because of the administrative chaos it would bring in the first several months, Administration economists feel it would be conducive of enormous public—and political—dissatisfaction.

Earlier yesterday, however, President Truman indicated to Democratic and congressional leaders he would not veto legislation giving him the wage, price and

Leopold Gives Throne to Son But Opponents Balk at 'Ifs'

Brussels (Tuesday) Aug. 1 (AP).—King Leopold hedged today on his agreement to delegate his royal powers to his son, Prince Baudouin. The unexpected action threw open Belgium's explosive political situation.

Earlier, in conferences with parliamentary leaders, Leopold had agreed without condition to step aside in favor of Baudouin. A Socialist leader announced that the agreement provided that Leopold would abdicate when the Crown Prince reaches 21 on September 7, 1951.

Then Leopold put in two reservations. He refused to be bound to abdicate the day his son reaches his majority. Leopold also did not agree with the nation's leaders over whether or not he should remain in the country during the rest of Baudouin's majority.

Before the King's about-face occurred, a special inter-party conference which had been grappling with the abdication crisis since

Malik Opens Fight to Seat Red China

Rules Issue No. 1 on U. N. Agenda Today, Shunting Resolution Of U. S. on Korea

Lake Success, July 31 (AP). Soviet Russia tonight disclosed she is coming back to the United Nations Security Council primarily to reopen her fight to seat Communist China—and that she considers peace in Korea should be second on the program of business.

Jacob A. Malik, Russian who is to be Council president for August announced this agenda tonight. This foreshadowed a fight over the program at the opening of Tuesday's Security Council meeting—the first the Russians have attended since January.

It is customary for presidents of the Security Council to submit in advance an agenda for each session. Thus it was Malik's turn tonight to send the program to Secretary General Trygve Lie. He did so, shortly after adjournment of the Council's last July meeting.

U. S. Resolution Offered

A United States resolution offered at today's meeting, denouncing North Korean defiance of the U. N. cease-firing orders, was left over for discussion at Tuesday's meeting. It was designed to beat Russia to the punch in the new diplomatic battle expected to develop with Russia's return to the Council.

But the language in which Malik framed his order of business makes no place for the United States resolution.

U. N. officials were unable to get Malik to agree tonight to change his announced agenda.

The entire Security Council has to approve the order of the agenda

BULLETIN

Tokyo (Tuesday), Aug. 1 (AP). First units of the U. S. Marines reached a south Korean port Tuesday afternoon, MacArthurs headquarters announced.

(The Tokyo Dispatch did not identify the Marines. The first marine division sailed from the United States two weeks ago.)

Tokyo, (Tuesday), Aug. 1 (AP).—American troops reinforcements continued to pour into South Korea today. Communist pressure slackened along the entire 160-mile front after the North Koreans slashed into Hypochon on the west and recaptured Yechon on the north.

U. S. Marines, fresh from the United States and ready for combat, debarked on the heels of elements of the Second Infantry division which arrived Monday.

Despite day-night assualts Monday by allied airmen all along the Korean warfront in support of U. N. ground forces, the Communists:

1. Exploited their breakthrough at Kochang in the United States sector on the west by knifing 16 miles southwest into Hyopchon. This placed them 33 miles southwest of Taegu, vital center on the main rail and highway supply routes leading to the front from Pusan.

2. Hammered into Chirye against United States opposition on the front just north of Kochang. Here the Reds were only 32 miles northwest of Taegu.

3. Recaptured bitterly-contested Yechon from the South Ko-

Famed Second Division Lands, Speeds to Korean Battle Line

With the American Forces in Korea, July 31 (U.P.).—Grim-faced troops of the famous Second Infantry Division poured ashore at a Southern Korean port today direct from the United States and left at once for the battle front.

"We are ready to take on the Reds," a colonel said. It was expected that the troops might be fighting within a few hours of their landing.

The infantrymen, first reinforcements to arrive in Korea direct from the United States, landed after a history-making crossing of the Pacific — approximately 6000 miles in about three weeks. They came ashore to the music of a Korean band.

The vice commander of the division, who preceded them by plane, greeted them. Officials handed them American and Korean republican flags.

Two Combat Teams Also Called From State Force

Marine Outfits Going To Full Strength; Air Wings Boosted; More Bombers to Far East

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Four National Guard divisions and other guard combat and supporting units last night were ordered into service on September 1 in a major step-up of the Nation's mobilization.

This move, obviously foretelling the dispatch of additional Regular Army divisions from the United States to Korea, climaxed a series of important actions to bolster the fighting front and our overall security.

In rapid succession, the White House and Pentagon announced:

1. President Truman asked Congress for an additional $4,000,000 to speed the rearming of other free nations opposing communism. He received a promise of swift Congressional action from Capitol Hill leaders.

Under the plan, no new authorization bill will be pressed and the pending $1,222,500,000 arms aid appropriation simply will be upped to $5,222,500,000 if Congress agrees. That means no change in the present law to include new countries. The great bulk of the funds, as before, will go for western Europe, though southeast Asia and the Philippines will get a larger share than before, officials said.

2. The Air Force disclosed that additional strategic bombing units have been ordered to the Far East. It was indicated that the medium bomber reinforcements are fairly substantial and probably mean two things: (1) Bolstering our aerial position in that area in case the fighting spreads; and (2) an intensified bomb assault on North Korea.

3. The two Marine divisions were directed to build up to full war strength—beyond what was previously planned—and two Marine air reserve squadrons will be called to active service to give each division a nine-squadron supporting air wing.

4. Members of the House Appropriations Committee said the White House plans to ask an additional 950 million dollars for naval aircraft procurement to build up naval aviation in proportion to the Air Force expansion. This will be over and above the 10.5 billion supplemental defense budget and run the military budget this Review of all nondefense appropriations with an eye to sharp cutbacks in funds already voted by the House was unanimously ordered by the House Appropriations Committee yesterday.

Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) said nine Appropriations subcommittees will immediatelw launch the search for nonmilitary savings.

In a week or two the full committee will bring out a "revision" bill which will order "substantial" cancellations in the omnibus funds bill passed by the House and now pending in the Senate.

"We are not going in for cheeseparing," said Cannon. "These will be substantial cuts involving big money.

Atomic Work In High Gear, AEC Reports

More Bomb Materials Being Produced Now Than Ever Before

During the first six months of 1950, plutonium and uranium-235, the explosives of the atom bomb, were produced at the highest rate in history, the Atomic Energy Commission reported to Congress yesterday.

Its semi-annual report also noted that in the first half year, over-all operations, presumably including the manufacture of the bombs themselves, exceeded all previous records.

It said atomic weapons and fissionable material, i.e., the explosives, were turned out at the rate authorized by the President, but it did not, of course, say what that rate was.

Little mention was given in the report to the hydrogen bomb. It was stated that after President Truman's "go ahead" order on January 31, "adjustments" were made to push H-bomb work, and that the result was "a substantial

Slashing Efforts Lose

Senate Asks for Aid in Korea As It Votes ECA $2,726,761,473

The Senate yesterday approved $2,726,761,473 for another year of Marshall Plan aid, but in effect warned participating countries to back up the United Nations in the Korean war effort.

The total amount voted the Economic Cooperation Administration was $58,070,000 higher than the Senate Appropriations Committee recommended, but it fell more than 200 million dollars below the Budget Bureau request.

Every effort to cut ECA deeper was overwhelmingly defeated following warnings that a further slash would "weaken the position of the allies we need in Europe."

The backhand appeal to ECA countries for support in Korea was in the form of an amendment by Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.), approved by a voice vote.

The amendment authorized Mr. Truman to withhold ECA funds from any country "which in the opinion of the President has failed, refused, or neglected to support the United Nations in the Korean war by supplying armed personnel, materials of war or services."

McClellan said he thought Marshall Plan countries that can help in Korea should do so and should be put on notice the United States means business in backing the U. N. against aggression.

Approval came after Senator Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.), in charge of the bill, agreed to take the amendment to conference.

An amendment by Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.) to cut back ECA funds by $718,691,473 was rejected, 59 to 12, following bitter debate. Immediately afterward, the Senate adopted an amendment by Senator Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.), increasing the ECA outlay by $58,070,000. The larger amount was approved 42 to 29.

Twenty Republicans joined with 39 Democrats to defeat the Kem slash. Two Democrats, Byrd of Enemy Targets Less Easy to Find; Troops Severely Strafed

Tokyo (Tuesday), Aug. 1 (AP).—Allied airmen hammered the North Koreans around the clock Monday. Fighter pilots working with ground troops reported a "growing shortage of suitable ground and vehicular targets."

An Air Force release covering air operations Monday said Far East Air Force bombers and fighters struck at about 15 bridges on the North Koreans' vital supply routes.

Every type of plane—from Mustang fighters to B-29s—hit at the enemy's supply lines from the front as far north as Anyang, about 10 miles north of Seoul.

Flying weather was excellent throughout Monday in most sectors.

Headquarters said the evidence points to a Communist decision to move vehicles chiefly by night to avoid air attack.

Fighters and bombers struck at marshalling yards and rail lines.

General Says Action Might Peril Formosa; U. S. Aid Forecast

Taipei, Formosa, Tuesday, Aug. 1 (AP).—General MacArthur today turned down Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's offer to send 33,000 Chinese Nationalists troops to Korea.

"Such action at this time," MacArthur said in a statement, "might so seriously jeopardize the defense of Formosa that it would be inadvisable."

The primary reason for his flying trip to Taipei, the general said, was to study the defense potential of this Nationalist island against attack from Chinese Communists.

MacArthur said:

"Arrangements have been completed for effective coordination between the American forces under my command and those of the Chinese government the better to meet any attack which a hostile force might be foolish enough to attempt.

"Such an attack would, in my opinion, stand little chance of success."

Special Course for Treatment Of A-Bomb Injuries Planned

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

The District Medical Society's executive board last night approved plans for a course in the treatment of atom-bomb injuries, available to the medical and related professions in the Washington area.

The executive board also approved plans for an immediate "inventory" of medical personnel, which—with the cooperation of medical societies in adjoining counties—will cover the Washington area.

The profession will be surveyed by means of a questionnaire to secure the names, addresses, home and office telephone numbers, office hours, type of practice (private or institutional), specialties, and military experience.

The dental profession is also cooperating in the inventory, which is expected to extend to other allied professions.

Theodore Wiprud, executive secretary of the District Medical Society, said the inventory would

Lack of Fan Belts Costs U. S. Three Badly Needed Tanks

By Hal Boyle

With U. S. Troops in South Korea, July 31 (AP).—An American sergeant who fled Red-captured Chinju said today three American tanks badly needed for defense of the city sat on a railway siding for four days because they lacked fan belts.

"The tanks never got into action or fired a shot," he declared, "and when I left Chinju 15 crewmen were waiting in hopes flat cars would arrive on which they could get the tanks out. They were under orders to destroy the tanks if a train didn't arrive."

A general officer later confirmed that orders had been given to destroy the tanks rather than let them be captured, and said he felt sure the order had been obeyed.

An investigation is under way to determine why the tanks were without fan belts despite two emergency air shipments.

A headquarters officer said one shipment of belts turned out to be the wrong size and a second box that was flown to Chinju was found to contain pistols instead.

Draft Delinquents Warned of Penalty

Marines Ease Bars Against Family Men

The Marine recruiting station announced yesterday that men with dependents now may be accepted for enlistment if they have had prior service in the Marine Corps.

Recruiting officers expect the lifting of this ban will step up the rate of enlistments, which already is the highest in almost four years.

Up to now, dependents have been a major factor in turning down applicants for enlistments, Marine recruiters said, if otherwise qualified, former Marines also will be accepted regardless of their previous rank.

The recruiters swore in 31 enlistees during July, highest number since September, 1946, the last month when enlistees received GI bill benefits.

Yesterday, six men were accepted out of 34 applying—the highest percentage of acceptances since the start of the Korean war. Two men previously qualified were sworn in.

The Army-Air Force recruiting office also had a busy day, enlisting 50 men, the highest for July. Thirty-five were sworn into the Army, five of them being re-enlistees. Of the 15 taken into the Air Force, three had prior service.

The Navy recruiting station, which had 21 male applicants yesterday, accepted nine, and also accepted one woman for Wave enlistment, of two who applied. Two recruits were sworn in. Four Reserves were recalled to active duty voluntarily. Four of five applicants were accepted for the inactive reserve and one was sworn in.

District draft officials, hampered by the increasing number of registrants who fail to appear for preinduction examinations, are going to get tough with the offenders.

A warning of "drastic" action "in the very near future" against those who don't show up came after almost one third of yesterday's quota of registrants did not respond to their notices.

William E. Leahy, District director of Selective Service, said the number of such delinquents was increasing to the point where local boards are spending most of their time checking up on why men didn't show up.

Those who fail to report for examination may be inducted immediately instead of getting the customary 21-day waiting period.

Leahy said 51 men—over 21 percent—failed to report among the 235 District registrants ordered to preinduction examinations last week and yesterday. The worst record was made yesterday, when 21 did not show up, of 65 to whom notices were sent.

Leahy said most of the absences were due to failure of registrants to notify local boards promptly of changes of address. Such failure is no excuse, he warned, as the law requires registrants to keep their boards informed of their whereabouts.

Registrants found qualified for service who fail to appear for induction when ordered will be reported to the U. S. Attorney as delinquents and will be subject to prosecution, Leahy warned.

The 44 examined yesterday at Arlington Farms recruiting station were from Local Boards 2 and 7.

Selective Service officials announced that 12 of the 46 examined last Monday were qualified for induction. They were from Boards 11 and 15.

In nearby Maryland, a transportation truck battalion of the National Guard became the first Maryland Guard unit to be called for active duty with the Army. Also called were two Army Reserve units, a quartermaster sales mobile company and a quartermaster maintenance company. All three will report August 19.

Lt. Gen. Gerow, Of Normandy Fame, Retires

Lieutenant Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, commander of the Second Army and the first Corps commander to hit the Normandy beachhead, bowed out of the Army yesterday.

The short, 62-year old soldier inspected his Second Army troops at Fort Meade for the last time yesterday, as Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army chief of staff, looked on.

Also present were Brig. Gen. William H. Abendroth, commander of the District National Guard, and the adjutants general of Maryland, Delaware, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Virginia and Pennsylvania—the area covered by the Second Army.

A 15-gun salute sounded just before General Gerow delivered the command over to his deputy, Maj. Gen. Clift Andrus. Lieut. Gen. James A. Van Fleet is scheduled to take over in a few days.

Early in the second World War, Gen. Gerow took command of the 29th Infantry Division, an outfit made up mainly of Maryland and Virginia National Guard units.

Later, he headed the Fifth Corps which made the Normandy landings. It was there he got the reputation as the general "who got uot with his men."

His future plans include a visit in Virginia and fishing in Minnesota. "I've had only three weeks' leave since before the war—I'm tired," he said. He and Mrs. Gerow will make their home in Florida.

A veteran of 39 years in the Army, Gen Gerow was born in Petersburg, Va., and is a graduate of Virginia Military Institute.

He had frequent assignments in Washington during his lengthy military career. After returning from France in 1919, he served here briefly in the office of the Chief Signal Officer and again in 1921, he was here in the office of the Chief of Infantry.

In July, 1923, he became an Assistant in the War Plans and Organization Section here, serving in this post until September, 1924. From August, 1926, to September, 1929, he was Assistant Executive in the office of the Assistant Secretary of War here and then he entered the Army War College here, graduating in 1931.

Returning in April, 1935, he became an Executive Officer of the War Plans Division. In 1940, he headed here again, this time as Assistant Chief of Staff, Chief of the War Plans Division, from where he moved to commanding general of the 29th Infantry Division at Fort Meade.

Landover Boy Wounded in KoreaFighting

Seventeen-year-old Jimmy Winston, 6112 Landover rd., Landover, Md., has been wounded in the Korean fighting, his mother revealed yesterday.

Pvt. James Winston quit Bladensburg High School last November to join up and was shipped to Japan as soon as he had completed his basic training in April.

His mother, Mrs. Anna Lee Fletcher, said she was notified by the Defense Department Sunday night. No details of the injuries were given. She said she had not heard from her son since June 8.

Winston's step-father, Robert Fletcher, was discharged from the Navy last month after serving six years.

Top Security Body to Use Aide System

NYHT News Service

President Truman has ordered the National Security Council, the Nation's top security agency, to form a permanent senior staff group to facilitate the Council's work. The order was issued on July 19, three weeks after the start of the Korean war.

The Council is composed of the President, the Vice President and the Secretaries of State and Defense and the chairman of the National Security Resources Board. At the President's request, the Secretary of the Treasury, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the director of the Central Intelligence Agency attend the Council sessions.

The President has asked aach of these officials, the regular members of the Council and those who attend its meetings as nonmembers, to nominate one person as a member of the senior staff group. If the nomination is satisfactory, the President will then designate this person as a member.

James S. Lay, jr., executive secretary of the Council, will head the group.

White House officials said the President's order for the organization of a senior staff group was intended to restrict attendance at the Council's meetings to workable limits. In the past, they said, the number of staff members attending meetings became so large it was difficult for Council members to discuss important questions freely.

What is contemplated now is the formation of a small senior staff group, each member of which would be qualified to participate in high-level decisions. They would be officials who would give their attention mainly to the Council's work.

Post Reporter

Washington's own Marine reserves, dressed to kill, went south yesterday.

They went with all the trappings—light carbines, heavy boondockers, dull green fatigues, floppy little caps and knapsacks. And wives, mothers and children trailed sadly along the sidelines.

They went to train at Camp Lejeune, N. C., the first Marine reserve outfit in the country to go.

The sendoff was standard operating procedure—hurry up and wait.

Block-Long Line

In the wicked 92-degree heat, they lined up a block long behind the Municipl Center at C st. at 3 p. m., two hours before train time.

They were mustered, brought to attention for the arrival of their skipper, Maj. David Condon, and again for the arrival of the colors.

The preliminaries were over at 3:30 p. m., with a half-hour to go before marching time. The women folk and the small fry just couldn't stand it.

One by one they walked out to the ranks for that last hug. Photographers had a field day. Hardbitten old sergeants cracked the usual jokes.

Standby Order Finally

In a few minutes the standby order came, and the blues, pinks and whites separated from the dull green, leaving the Marines hurriedly rubbing off the lipstick smudges.

By 4 p. m., when the Marine Band started thumping, four Marines were overcome by heat and had to be taken to the station in an ambulance. A fifth gave out on the line of march.

One other marine rode to the station. His right arm was in a cast. Corpl. Alfred Di Marzo, 20, a member of the Woodland Beach Volunteer Fire Department, fell off a fire truck on the way to a fire Sunday. He had been hospitalized.

"I told them I wanted to report with my outfit, so they said okay and told me to go to the hospital as soon as I got to Camp Lejeune," he said.

Speeches at Station

At Union Station, there were speeches. Somehow, the families had got there ahead of the troops. They pushed against the barriers, picking out their men, daubing at their eyes, waving.

Meanwhile, Police Inspector John S. Fondahl, until recently commander of Washington's Marine Reserves, and Maj. Gen. M. H. Silverthorn, director of Marine Reserves, were delivering the usual words of encouragement, otherwise known in the Corps as "Gung Ho!"

Then, to the tune of the Marines' Hymn, they marched down to the track to pile aboard.

A handful of women Marines accompanied the contingent. For two of them, there were sad goodbyes also.

Husbands Stay Behind

Corpl. Virginia S. Kegel and Sergt. Josephine R. Gibson were leaving their husbands behind. Remaining on the home front were W. G. Kegel, of 2006 Fort Davis st. se., and Edmund A. Gibson, of 1507 59th ave., Hillside, Md.

As his men got ready to move, Major Condon expressed satisfaction with his men. Sixty percent were combat veterans. Many were on that first landing at Guadalcanal.

Was there any trouble rounding them up?

"The only trouble I had was keeping at home the guys we couldn't take for one reason or another," said the major.

House Unit Plans Hearings

Filling of Congress Vacancies After Enemy Blow Is Studied

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

A House subcommittee will shortly begin hearings on what sort of steps should be taken to keep the Government in operation if an atomic bomb should knock out downtown Washington.

Representative Walter (D., Pa.), chairman of a House Judiciary group in charge of several bills on the subject, said yesterday he hopes to begin hearings this week.

Walter said that whereas the committee had hesitated opening such hearings before the Korean war for fear of alarming the public, the war has so altered the atmosphere such a consideration no longer holds.

He said the range of problems includes the establishment of duplicate records and headquarters outside the central Washington area and the question of how to fill vacancies in Congress should the bulk of its membership be killed in one blow.

Some of the problems, he said, could be solved by a new law or even an executive order. The Congressional succession problem, as far as House membership is concerned, would require a constitutional amendment.

Walter said his committee probably would call on officials of the National Security Resources Board's civilian defense section as well as on military officials for their suggestions.

NSRB already has developed a "Plan for the Security of the Nation's Capital," disclosed in The Washington Post last week, which contemplates dispersal of key agencies to a series of new Government towns to be built within a 50-mile radius of the zero milestone. This would be handled in a separate bill, however.

Bills on various phases of the problem have been introduced by Representatives Holifield (D., Calif.) and Patman (D., Tex.).

Chicago Plans Arm Tattoos Of Blood Type

Chicago, July 31 (U.P.).—A voluntary plan to tattoo the blood-type of every person in the Chicago area on his body was announced today to provide the city with "a walking blood bank" in event of an atomic bomb attack.

The Chicago Medical Civil Defense Committee adopted the plan and said it would be put in operation within a week.

The volunteers would have their blood type—O, A, B or AB—tattooed on their chests under their left arm, a spot which the expert said would be most likely to escape injury.

The medical group looked forward to having the entire population tatooed with a technique as painless as vaccination.

The tattoo would enable doctors to determine immediately what type of blood a victim in an atomic blast would need.

It would also provide the city with properly identified persons who could give blood on the spot to bomb victims.

Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, chairman of the Medical Defense Committee, said the typing of blood and the making of the tattoo should cost about $1. He said everyone should think enough of his life to be able to pay it.

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Chicago Health Chief, said his department would stand the expense of anyone who was unable to bear the cost.

get under way "immediately."

The course in treatment of atom-bomb injuries will be given under the auspices of the Medical Society and the United States Surgeon General's Office. It is expected a formal request for the latter's cooperation will be made today.

The course, according to present plans, will comprise three four-hour session. It will be given the mornings of September 22, 26 and 29 and will be repeated at night on the same dates for those unable to attend morning classes.

The sessions will cover medical aspects of atomic bomb injury, biological effect and pathology, diagnosis and treatment of ionizing radiation and other effects of the bomb. Lectures will be illustrated with films and slides.

The lectures will be given by personnel of the Surgeon General's Office trained in atomic warfare and members of the Medical Society trained in medical aspects of atomic warfare in courses given under the auspices of the National Resources Security Board and the Atomic Energy Commission.

In addition to this initial course, "booster" lectures will be given in the future.

Courses in the general medical aspects of civilian defense, including other unconventional forms of warfare, are expected to be given at some not too distant date.

The course in atomic bomb injury is under the direction of the cooperating medical societies' Committee for Emergency Medical Service for the Metropolitan Area, of which Dr. A Claggett Gray is chairman and Dr. William D. Claudy is vice chairman, and chairman of the subcommittee for the course.

Other members of the subcommittee headed by Claudy, member at large of the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons, include: Dr. John B. Ross, Dr. Vincent Lovine, Dr. Alfred E. Brigulio, Dr. Richard Whelton, Dr. Carl Plotoff, and Col. William L. Wilson, who is special assistant to the Surgeon General in charge of disaster planning.

The special course will be open to members of the medical societies of the District; Arlington, Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties, Alexandria, the District Medico-Chirurgical Society, dental, nursing, pharmaceutical, veterinarian organizations; and representatives of the Police and Fire and Health Departments and the Red Cross.

State Chambers Uphold Johnson's Economy Efforts

Lack of defense spending is not the cause of any American shortcomings in Korea, a report prepared for the Council of State Chambers of Commerce asserted yesterday.

It backed Defense Secretary Louis Johnson's economy efforts, and said it is important to get the most out of every defense dollar.

The report, signed by Council Research Division Alvin A. Burger, said the country did not get full value in military preparedness from $48,422,000,000 spent in the last four years. This, it said, was due to "excessive housekeeping waste in the armed services."

But it added that "thanks to the efforts of Secretaries Forrestal and Johnson to reduce such waste, we are now beginning to get more value for the tax dollars invested in national defense." This referred to economy moves started by the late Defense Secretary James Forrestal and pushed by Johnson.

4 Guard Divisions Called Into Service year to about 26 billion dollars, not counting foreign arms aid.

A Pentagon spokesman said that orders to the National Guard forces earmarked for call now are being issued. He identified them only as four divisions, two regimental combat teams and certain supporting forces.

Announcement of which units were selected for call, will not be made until their commanders have received the orders, it was said.

There are 27 Guard divisions and 20 separate regimental combat teams. All are far below war strength and must be strengthened by transfers of trained men and recruits or draftees and then given several months of intensive training before they are ready for combat.

War strength of a National Guard division is over 18,500 officers and men and that of a regimental combat team about 5000. Last spring, according to data in the House Appropriations Committee's published hearings, the 27 divisions ranged in strength from 11,621 men in the Thirty-First Division (Albama-Mississippi Guards) to 6550 in the Forty-First Division (Oregon-Washington Guards).

The Twenty-eighth Division (Pennsylvania) had a strength of 11,056, the Fifty-first (Florida-South Carolina) totaled 10,621 men, the Fortieth (California), 9917, and the Thirtieth (North Carolina-Tennessee), 9450. Presumably, Army chiefs would want to call up those which have been more thoroughly organized and are best trained and equipped—though geographical distribution of the mobilization may be a factor.

The Twenty-ninth Division (Maryland and Virginia) had only 7435 officers and men, according to the report.

Decision to call in the Guard divisions marks a major shift in military mobilization plans. Defense chiefs have said that the program did not contemplate increasing the number of Army divisions immediately, either by ordering in the National Guard or creating new Regular units.

But it has become plain within the past few days that the Red forces were far stronger than at first believed. Military briefers said all along that North Koreans had nine divisions and about 100,000 men. Now spokesmen in the Far East put the enemy total at near 200,000 and are talking of 12 divisions.

This and the all-out enemy assault which has driven back American forces convinced our military chiefs that while the five divisions already in Korea or on the way should stop the Red advance, it was not enough for a counter-offensive.

But we could not risk sending over any of the five remaining divisions in the "mobile reserves" here at home—four Army and one Marine—without replacing them. The only alternative was a National Guard division call. Furthermore, there is no way of building up the Guard divisions to full strength and getting them ready for combat without ordering them into Federal service.

Political considerations—the touchy problem of which State forces to call and which to leave home—probably held up the decision far more than the money involved. Officials believed last night that substantial additional funds must be asked above the 10.5-billion-dollar supplemental defense budget to pay for the additional Army and Marine forces ordered into service yesterday.

An Air Force spokesman indicated there was no present intention of calling up the Air National Guard, and noted that the "primary mission" of most of the Air Guard is the defense of continental United States.

The USAF announcement of the transfer of additional bombers to the Far East identified them only as "additional medium bomb units" of the Strategic Air Command. It is believed, however, that the new reinforcements are of about the same size as those ordered across the Pacific a month ago. These later were described as 60 Boeing B-29s from two West Coast groups.

Until recently, B-29 groups have had a complement of 30 bombers. This is being stepped up, however, to 45 bombers and 20 B-29 aerial tankers.

At present, the Air Force's strategic bomber forces total 15 groups—3 heavy Convair B-50 groups and one B-29 group now are in England or enroute, and the greater part of three are in the Far East. Transfer of the larger portion of two more groups to Japan, thus will put a substantial part of our Strategic Air Command over seas—within reach of targets in Russia should the war spread.

Blows at North Korea Seen.

At the same time, the shift in strength is believed to augur a stepup in air strikes on strategic targets in North Korea. Such bombardment has been ata level well below the capabilities of the exhisting B-29 forces now in Japan, but that is believed due in part to weather and in part to the fact that the Far Eastern Air Force has had an overriding priority to give support to ground troops. B-29s have had trouble finding profitable ttrgets near the front.

Yesterday, the superforts had a big day, dropping 572 bombs in 55 sorties. The total number of sorties—398—was a record.

A presidential message requesting the additional four billions in arms aid is expected to go to Congress today. President Truman discussed the proposal with congressional leaders yesterday and Chairman Clarence C. Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee said there was "unanimous agreement" to the short-cut method of providing the funds.

Short and Wherry Dissent

Representative Dewey Short (R., Mo.) said later this was not correct—that he and Senator Kenneth Wherry (R., Neb.), the GOP floor leader did not go along with the plan to bypass congressional legislative committees. But other Republicans did assent.

It was reported after the White House meeting that the possibility of arming western Germany and Japan and extending arms aid to Japan was discussed. Some of those present, however, said that the President, Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson want such decisions postponed.

Mr. Truman was said to have told the Congressmen that he feels General MacArthur, with his approval, could arm enough Japanese to take over the occupation role formerly carried on by American units now fighting in Korea. But the Capitol Hill leaders understood that no such decision had been made.

No Arms Money for Korea

Officials thought last night it was unlikely any money would be asked for Korea in the four-billion-dollar program. They feel it better to simply keep track of the arms being given the Korean Army from MacArthur's reserve stocks and tally the bill to replace them later.

The additional money for naval aircraft procurement will boost the amount available for new orders this year to about $2,230,000,000. Together with the 4.3 billions already asked for Air Force plane buying, and over a billion reported slated for ordering 1600 jet fighters for western Europe, the total new aircraft procurement programs probably will reach eight billions.

Building the two Marine divisions to full war-time strength would triple their existing power. War strength of such a unit is 23,000 officers and men, and the First Marines now en route to Korea were said to total only 7000. Marine reserve battalions already called up, plus new recruits, will strengthen the divisions. Previous plans had been to build up the Marines to somewhat less than war strength.

Hold Nonregular Officers

Other defense developments:

1. The Army announced that commanders have been authorized to hold nonregular officers in service for an indefinite period if they do not volunteer to remain in uniform. Nearly all of the 39,000 nonregulars would have been eligible for discharge in 1951 under the three-year commitment signed in 1948. At the same time, it was directed to hold over-age officers with "critical skills" in service after reaching the maximum age for their grade.

2. Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), of the House Armed Services Committee named nine "expediting subcommittees" to help speed up the rearmament program. The function of the four-man subcommittees will be to keep Congress advised of the progress of rearming and keep an eye open for bottlenecks, Vinson said. There will be subcommittees for: anti-submarine warfare; guided missles; radar defenses; military manpower; tactical aviation; Air Force plane procurement; Navy plane procurement; stockpiling; and tanks.

3. Congress gave final approval to legislation suspending the present statutory ceilings on armed forces manpower and authorizing construction of new submarines and other war vessels. The bills now go to the White House.

U. S. Formosa Aid Forecast

ling the waters between Nationalist Formosa and the Chinese Communist mainland under orders of President Truman to prevent a Red invasion of the island.

MacArthur noted that "the policy has been enunciated that this island, including the Pescadores, is not under present circumstances subject to military invasion."

"It is my responsibility and firm purpose to enforce this decision," he said.

Wellington Koo, Nationalist Chinese Ambassador to the United States, arrived in Taipei shortly before MacArthur made his statement.

American arms and equipment for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Chinese Nationalist army on Formosa probably will be one of the main results of General MacArthur's current visit to this island.

There was good reason to believe MacArthur had asked Chiang what the Nationalist troops needed in the way of arms.

The U. S. Seventh Fleet, which is under MacArthur's direction, is patrolling the Formosa Strait to prevent a Chinese Communist attack on this island.

There also is speculation that Chiang might urge modification of the present United Nations ban on Nationalist attacks on the Red mainland, at least so as to permit raids on Red airfields.

At the same time, it is recognized that the possibility of giving the Chinese Reds an excuse for open intervention in the Korean war have to be weighed carefully.

Peiping Offers Asia Mediation Plan for Peace

London, July 31 (AP).—An official British Commonwealth source today said the Communist government in China has proposed a settlement of the Korean conflict through mediation by Asian nations.

Coming on the eve of Russia's return to the United Nations, the action of Communist China may be related to that of the Soviet Union, and Russia may formally present the Chinese idea to the Security Council, the informant said.

He said Red China's position was presented recently by Prime Minister Chou En Lai and was conveyed a few days ago to the Indian Ambassador to Peiping, K. M. Pannikar. Britain's representative in Peiping, J. C. Hutchison, the source said, has given a full report of the Chou En Lai-Pannikar conversation to the British Foreign Office.

Issue Not Raised

As far as could be ascertained, Chou En Lai did not raise the issue whether the North Koreans should be required to withdraw to their own territory above the 38th parallel, but did declare the American forces should pull out. The United States has taken the position that the Communists must withdraw as a condition to a settlement.

Red China's mediation idea, the informant said, includes these details:

There should be a quick ceasefire.

The Asian neighbors of Korea—not any of the Western powers—should try for a final settlement in the divided country with the idea of reuniting it and pacifying it.

Countries specifically named by Chou En Lai that might participate in any mediation undertaking would include India, Pakistan and Burma.

It is not known whether India has replied. It is believed she will not indicate her reactions until she hears what Jakob Malik, the Soviet's chief United Nations delegate, has to say about Korea when he assumes the chairmanship of the Security Council Tuesday.

Attack Not Condoned

Red China's idea came after India sought unsuccessfully to find a basis for negotiating a Korean settlement between Russia and the United States.

In New Delhi President Rajendra Prasad said Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru's peace proposals to Russia and the United States were not intended to condone the Communist invasion of South Korea.

Prasad explained in an address opening a special session of Parliament that Nehru's letters to Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Prime Minister Stalin were intended to strengthen the United Nations, add to its moral force and "facilitate early termination of the dangerous situation."

Referring to Nehru's recent trip to Indonesia, Malaya and Burma, Prasad said the conflict in Korea has made it all the more necessary that the independent countries of Asia cooperate for the maintenance of peace and the preservation of their own freedom.

before discussions can proceed. It is the first item of the order of business.

As Malik framed it, Russia wants to take up the question of seating the Chinese Communist representative. Up until now, all Russia has asked has been ousting of the Chinese Nationalist delegate.

When Russia walked out, she said she would not return until the Nationalists were kicked out of the U. N.

Malik phrased the Korean situation this way: "Peaceful settlement of the Korean question."

Heretofore, the Korean question has appeared on the agenda under the title: "Concerning the complaint of aggression upon the Republic of Korea."

That is the title under which the new United States resolution was offered. Technically, Malik still has the whip hand in fending off the United States resolution, but the Council itself will have to decide that by ballot Tuesday.

Under the Malik program, hours—probably days—of debate on the Chinese representation question might delay further discussion on the Korean question.

The U. N. however, has both its military program and its relief aid program in shape to roll in high gear, and it appeared there was nothing that Malik could do to stop it.

Unde his "peaceful settlement of the Korean question" framework, the Russian can introduce mediation proposals similar to those of India's Premier Jawaharlal Nehru, calling for seating of Communist China as a prelude to the conciliation attempt.

An Indian spokesman said today, however, that India does not want the Chinese question used as a bargaining point.

The United States resolution, offered by Chief Delegate Warren R. Austin, does not rule out conciliation proposals. But the Council has indicated generally up until now that it insists on a North Korean rollback to the 38th parallel.

Seeks to Avoid Spread

Austin said his resolution was aimed at keeping the Korean conflict from "spreading and becoming even more destructive and terrible."

It denounces continued North Korean defiance of U. N. orders, and calls on all countries to use their influence to prevail on North Korean authorities to cease their defiance.

This was an open but probably hopeless bid to Russia again to call off the North Koreans. Russia rejected such a direct bid from the United States shortly after the North Korean invasion June 25.

The resolution also calls on all countries not to help or encourage the North Koreans.

"It is clear that not all members of the United Nations are supporting this vital peace-making effort of the United Nations," Austin told the council.

"Moral, if not material support is being given to the North Korean authorities that can fairly be regarded as giving aid and comfort to the enemy of the United Nations."

The Council adopted, 9-0—with Yugoslavia abstaining—a French-British-Norwegian resolution arranging for relief aid to 1,000,000 or more Korean war refugees.

It puts preliminary distribution of the aid—its total cost has not even been estimated—in the hands of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, under the unified command of the U. N. It calls on the Economic and Social Council to get all its specialized agencies to work on supplementing military aid in South Korea with humanitarian aid.

Communist countries are represented in few of the specialized agencies like the World Health Organization, the Food and Agricultural Organization, and UNESCO.

Austin called this "an historic step in the total mobilization of the world's peace machinery."

"The agencies we created so painstakingly over a period of five years are now available for a massive organized effort to meet the human problems brought upon us by aggressive warfare," Austin said.

"It is the first time in history that such tools have been at hand, ready-made, in an emergency of this kind."

The new United States resolution was brief. It said:

"The Security Council condemns the North Korean authorities for their continued defiance of the United Nations;

"Calls upon all states to use their influence to prevail upon the authorities of North Korea to cease this defiance;

"Calls upon all states to refrain from assisting or encouraging the North Korean authorities and to refrain from action which might lead to the spread of the Korean conflict to other areas and thereby further endanger international peace and security."

Stores Here Increase Price of Cigarettes

Popular brand of cigarettes have increased in price by one cent a pack, or half a cent a pack if two are bought, in most stores, following a price boost announced by manufacturers last week.

Drugstores and cigar stores, which have sold popular brands for 17 cents a pack and $1.57 or $1.59 per carton, have marked them up to 18 cents a pack, two for 35, and $1.66 a carton, with slight variations in a few stores.

Australians To Report on U.N. Troop Aid

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies of Australia said here yesterday that he expects to make an announcement in "the next 24 hours" about Australian ground forces taking part in the Korean fighting.

It already had been announced in Sydney that Australia probably would send a division to join the United States troops and South Koreans. Army and Navy Minister Josiah Francis said Thursday that the Down Under contingent might total 10,000 or more men.

Prime Minister Menzies, in a talk at the National Press Club, evoked laughter and applause when he talked about the long retreat in Korea.

"Im not among those who want to be critical of retreat," he said. "The people of my race have had more experience in early retreats than any people on the face of the globe."

Truman's Move Lauded

He looked forward to the day when the forces fighting under the banner of the United Nations would "move inexorably and successfully in the other direction."

The husky Australian statesman said that President Truman's decision to halt Communist aggression in Korea had stirred the free peoples more than any occurrance in years.

"I don't care whether you are a Republican or Democrat, or a Henry Wallace, I want to tell you that the declaration of your President rang around the world like a tocsin."

Prime Minister Menzies, looking beyond Korea, called for a "functional union" of the countries outside the Iron Curtain. He said that they should work, act and think together so as to organize their power and array "the forces of freedom against the forces of darkness."

He said that, just as good can come out of evil, so "marvelous things" could result from war.

He told of the good will generated by American GIs who served in Australia in World War II—how they ate up all the beef, drank all the Scotch, and "collared all of our best girls; at any rate, the best-looking ones."

The Prime Minister said that he brought a message of good will from Australia, and added:

"You may one time think you want friends in Australia; you have them."

Red Threat Noted

In a "cross-examination" from those at the Press Club luncheon, Benzies said that Australia was more concerned about the Communist threat from within than without. He said that the Communist in his country, though not strong numerically, were strong in the sense that they held important positions in organizations like labor unions.

He said that some preferred to look upon Communists as philosophers.

"I call them fifth columnists in Australia," he said. "And when it comes to dealing with fifth columnists, I'm all for dealing with them before the main battle, not after."

Did he think another world war was inevitable? It wasn't, he said, if the free nations were willing to make sacrifices and to build up their strength to protect the peace.

What was his theory about what the Russians were up to in the United Nations?

The Prime Minister, turning to Holy Writ, quoted the passage about the things that are "hidden from the wise and prudent" though "revealed unto babes," and also the passage: "There is nothing hidden that shall not be made known."

The Prime Minister is scheduled to address the House of Representatives at noon today and the Senate at 2:15 p. m.

The Prime Minister will remain in Washington until August 3. Most of his time wil be occupied with official discussions.

'Beat Hell Out of Us,' General Says of Chinju, His 9th Defeat

With American Forces Outside Chinju, July 31 (AP).—Powerful North Korean thrusts today forced United States trops to withdraw from this southern coastal anchor of the allied defense lines in South Korea after a three-day battle.

A general officer who directed the defense of Chinju in its last hours chocked with rage as he described the loss of the vital road and rail center and a valuable new airfield nearby.

"They beat the hell out of us," he said frankly. "This is the ninth licking in a row. I have been fighting all my life but I never lost nine in a row before."

American casualties were fairly heavy but frontline officers said Red losses were double those of the Americans. A South Korean force rushed into action in an attempt to help the Americans avoid envelopment.

On a mountain roadway outside Chinju jammed with panicky Korean refugees, Brig. Gen. Pearson Menoher of Arlington, Mass., gave this account of the battle:

"After almost two days of fighting the Reds hit us at 4 p. m. yesterday (1 a. m. EDT (Sunday) on our left flank. But we stopped them temporarily.

"The first night high-velocity weapons shelled our positions and shelled the city, too. About 4 a. m. today they infiltrated our artillery.

"I counterattacked within an hour with a reserve force but ran head-on into a penetration of between 600 of 800 men led by tanks. We couldn't halt them without tanks."

More Yanks Landed; Reds Seize 4 Towns

reans at the northernmost part of the front just after it turns east from its north-south line. Yechon is 52 miles north of Taegu.

4. Plunged into Chinju and 5 miles beyond in their thrust to the east in far South Korea. This Communist spear threatens Pusan, the main supply port 50 miles farther east, and likewise to flank the north-south U. N. line.

Allied aircraft kept up their pounding of the Reds along the front in close support of U. N. ground troops Monday despite bad weather, Fifth Air Force Headquarters said. Fighters and light bombers flew 170 sorties, destroying six tanks, damaging four others and shooting up other Communist targets in the battle zone.

There was no formal announcement from General MacArthur's headquarters or Eighth Army field headquarters that the fresh troops under Maj. Gen. Laurence B. Keiser had arrived. Nor was there any indication that the full division (normally 12,000 to 15,000 men) had debarked.

Associated Press Correspondent Tom Lambert, who witnessed the arrival, noted, however, that these well-equipped and physically-fit troops—including a sprinkling of veterans of World War II's hottest European campaigns—"should provide increased competition for North Korean Communists who so far have had almost their own way."

Writing from the front line, Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead said the news was sweet to the hard-pressed United States First Cavalry and Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth Infantry divisions, but warned:

"These fresh troops will not turn the tide of the war—which is running against the American foot soldiers. They will plug up another hole, and their presence will give a big psychological boost to all the fighting men."

(There was no word of the First Marine Division elements which sailed for Korea from the United States west coast two weeks ago, a little ahead of the Army Second Division. Washington sources doubted if the two divisions numbered more than 20,000 to 23,000 men in all.

General MacArthur's war summary early Tuesday conceded that the brunt of North Korean breakthrough attempts had shifted from the center of the box-shaped defense line to the west and southwest.

The war summary, lagging behind field dispatches, reported heavy pressure by two North Korean regiments paced by a dozen tanks in the vicinity of Chinju. Eighth Army headquarters said, however, that the town which had anchored the southern end of the American and South Korean defense perimeter was lost Monday morning.

Correspondent Hal Boyle, in the Chinju sector, said veteran 24th infantry division troops defending Chinju "escaped out of the city on different roads after running a gantlet of rifle and machinegun fire."

The divided American forces suffered "fairly heavy" casualties in their withdrawal but losses inflicted on the attacking North Koreans were said to be double the American dead and wounded.

A South Korean force was brought into the action to help the battered Twenty-fourth Division units to avoid entrapment—a battle they have fought time and again since their first delaying action began July 5 near Suwon—more than 150 air miles north of Chinju.

The North Koreans also hammered with strong forces farther north, where they had driven 8 miles east of Kochang to threaten First Cavalry positions in the center of the line.

MacArthur's summary said this pressure was "greatly increasing."

Small units of the First Cavalry Division met two battalions of North Koreans at Chirye and engaged in a sharp machine gun and hand grenade fight, with the Reds making slight advances.

This placed the enemy within 8 miles of Kumchona—point that Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of the Eighth Army was determined to hold at all costs. Field reports said Chirye itself was a "no-man's-land" Monday night.

Other Red forces have pressed to within 4 miles of Kumchon from the west. The First Cavalry pulled back to avoid entrapment and flanking from the south.

American and Australian warplanes in repeated strikes took a deadly toll of North Korean troops moving along the Kuchang highway toward Taegu. One pilot reported the roadsides were littered "like confetti" with white-robed North Korean casualties.

MacArthur's Tuesday war summary reported the Twenty-fifth Division front, north and east of the First Cavalry positions around Kumchon, was "relatively quiet."

The situation around Hamchang, an important rail center guarding the north approaches to Kumchon, appeared confused and possession of the town was in doubt.

Field reports said Monday the Reds had infiltrated Hamchang. The headquarters' summary apparently based on older information, placed American defense lines four miles north and west of the city.

To the east South Korean troops attacked in the Yechon area Saturday and Sunday. A South Korean army spokesman said 347 enemy troops had been killed in the action while nine prisoners including two women were taken prisoners.

The number of North Korean casualties mounted steadily as the all-out effort to win a quick decision spurred them to desperate attacks.

A headquarters spokesman revised upward his estimate of North Korean dead from 31,000 to 37,000. The spokesman reiterated that the Reds were running short of tanks except for major pushes.

On the extreme northeastern anchor of the line, Red troops held grimly to Yongdok in the face of American and South Korean attacks.

Naval patrols Monday continued to blockade Korean waters and pound troop concentrations with harrassing fire.

Warships of Canada, France, New Zealand and The Netherlands joined American and British vessels in the blockade.

Va. Commission Backs Alexandria Water Company

Richmond, Va., Aug. 31 (AP).—The right of the Alexandria Walter Co. to require a deposit for water line extensions was upheld today by the State Corporation Commission.

The commission refused to act on a complaint brought by A. Lincoln Green and the Home Lands Development Co. and found the regulation "is not unjust or unreasonable or unfairly discriminatory."

At a hearing on July 25, Green, who owns about 8 acres of land on Key drive, asked the SCC to abolish the connection deposit rule as "an unreasonable" charge, which, he contended, hindered development of new homes in the city of Alexandria.

Green said he would have to deposit about $900 to get water lines extended to his property.

Lent Custody Decision Deferred

Final determination of the custody of five-year-old Max U. L. Lent, jr., was deferred until August 30 by Judge Walter T. McCarthy in Arlington Circuit Court yesterday.

A decision in the custody battle was postponed after Judge McCarthy was informed that a psychiatrist engaged to examine the boy's mother, Mrs. Mary V. Lent, 28, of Athens, Ohio, was not prepared to submit his report "at this time." Mrs. Lent volunteered to undergo the psychiatric examination at an earlier hearing.

Mrs. Lent has charged her husband, Sergt. Max Lent, 32, of Fort Myer, took the boy from her after she was detained, she claimed, illegally in a Walter Reed Hospital neuro-psychiatric ward for five days.

South and as far north as Yechon were strafed.

The Air Force reported gasoline and fuel dumps set afire at Chonju, about 35 miles southwest of Taejon, and in a village 5 miles north of Yechon. Pilots also reported destruction of enemy gasoline supplies in a strike on houses in Yongdong.

300 Sorties Flown in Day

In all, warplanes flew almost 300 sorties during the day—250 of them by fighter planes.

Working close to the front lines in the south and central sectors, the planes machinegunned and rocketed the enemy.

Australian fighters worked over the Hadong area. They reported strafing Communist troop columns made up of from 300 to 400 men.

Returning pilots said anti-aircraft fire increased and was more accurate. There was no damage, however, to Allied planes. No enemy planes were sighted.

Enemy materiel reported hit in Monday's operation included: 66 vehicles, including some tanks, 2 locomotives, 26 railroad cars, 20 buildings and 11 artillery pieces and gun positions.

Much of War Plant Wrecked

The Far East Air Force bomber command assayed bomb damage to North Korea's main munition factory by a mass raid Sunday and reported it 85 percent knocked out.

Nearly 50 B-29s blasted the Chosen Nitrogen Co. plant at Hungnam with 500 tons of high explosives. Hungnam, on the east coast of Korea 130 miles north of the Thirty-eighth Parallel, is the heart of the North Korean explosives industry.

"No further war supplies will be produced in this factory for some time," the bomber command said.

Air officers said the raid had a twofold effect. It eliminated ammunition for the battle zone and wiped out facilities for making more.

In World War II the Japanese operated the plant on a full production basis as a prime munitions manufacturing center. The plant was expanded and improved after the war.

The Hungnam attack was the third major strategic bombing strike of this war. Others were at Wonsan in North Korea and at Seoul, former capital of South Korea.

Crop Control Bill Passed by House

The House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate a bill which would make it almost certain that the cotton crop will be under Government controls the next two years.

It was passed, 160 to 85, after the House refused, 179 to 120, to sent the bill back to committee.

The bill revises state and county cotton acreage allotment systems and extends the national soil conservation program through 1952. It also put a two million-acre limit on the 1951 peanut crop.

Second Division Lands, Speeds to Front Line

service at a makeshift altar for those who wanted to attend.

"I've got some men here itching for trouble," an officer said as he stepped down the gangplank.

"They'll find plenty of it," a dockside GI just back from the battle front assured him.

Within a few minutes of their landing, the troops—25 percent of them World War II veterans—were moving into trucks and trains and leaving for a secret destination on the front.

Word was passed that they might be in combat within a few hours at some critical point of the front where the North Korean Communists were driving desperately, without regard for losses, in a bid for a quick victory.

"If ever help came in the nick of time, this is it," an officer said as he watched the Second Division men move off.

That seemed the general opinion. Officers also said that this one landing confirmed Gen. Douglas MacArthur's statement that the Reds already had lost the war.

A few of the men in the Second are veterans of both world wars. Every man has the high tradition of this "Indian Head" Division, whose slogan is "Second to None."

The division's 9th Regiment goes back to Gettysburg. Its 95th birthday was celebrated at sea July 25.

(The division is commanded by Maj. Gen. Laurence B. Keiser. Shortely before it sailed he replaced Maj. Gen. Walter Robertson, its wartime commander, who retired.)

In World War II the Second Division landed in Normandy on D-Day plus one. It captured Brest, fought in the Battle of the Bulge, and drove into Czechoslovakia.

The news that the Second Division was here—and direct from home—spread fast through the war zone to the men in the line. Morale was raised at once.

"Never have so many looked so good to so few," a veteran of the Korea fighting said. "With these boys we should be able to hold them."

The Second Division comprised part of the "extra muscle" that Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commanding United States troops in Korea, said he needed to turn the discouraging retreat of his men into attack.

While the immediate assignment of the reinforcements was a secret, it was understood here they will fill in gaps in the thin American defense line for the present.

"They can just take any road and they'll find plenty of trouble," an officer commented.

Anti-Support Grower Fells Cherry Trees

Suttons Bay, Mich., July 31 (U.P.).—Fred Reed started chopping down 250 of his 350 cherry trees today "because I don't want to have to depend on the Government to support my crops."

Growers are being offered 4 cents a pound in advance for their cherries with the remainder contingent upon what the price stabilizes at through Government purchases.

Reed said he will grow strawberries instead. Suttons Bay is in one of the largest cherry-growing districts in the Nation.

O'Mahoney Files Bill For Tax on Profits

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) yesterday called for a stiff excess profits tax on business to help finance Government spending brought on by the Korean fighting.

O'Mahoney, chairman of the Senate-House Economic Committee, introduced in the Senate what he called a "Korean excess profits tax" bill. He told a news conference it was the way to put out of business "profiteers and speculators" looking for quick war profits.

O'Mahoney offered his proposal as an amendment to the new tax bill which has not yet reached the Senate. The bill is designed to meet President Truman's request for five billion dollars in new revenues through increased taxes on individuals and corporations.

O'Mahoney's proposal, if approved, would apply to profits after July 1, 1950. It would establish as normal 75 percent of the profits earned during the years 1947, 1948, and 1949.

"Profits before taxes in these three years were running about four times the profits before taxes prior to World War II," O'Mahoney said. "Seventy-five percent is just about equal to the level of profits during the war."

He proposed a levy ranging from 65 to 100 percent on profits above those of the base.

Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee and high-ranking minority member of the Senate Finance Committee, said yesterday he was opposed to consideration of an excess profits tax before the January session of Congress.

In taking this position, Senator Taft got squarely behind Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.), Finance Committee chairman, who has insisted the controversial excess profits levy should not be considered injected into revenue legislation at this time.

Chairman George has called the Finance Committee into executive session August 2 to consider President Truman's immediate tax recommendations, calling for five billion dollars additional revenue, to be drawn from individual and corporate income tax increases and the closing of tax law loopholes.

In view of the sentiment in the Finance Committee, as now expressed by Senators George and Taft and Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), indications were that no excess profits tax would be enacted by the Eighty-first Congress.

The O'Mahoney theme was taken up by several other members of Congress, including Representative Vito Marcantonio (A. L., N. Y.).

"I favor freezing profits, not wages," said Representative Marcantonio, who also advocated legislation "limiting to $25,000 the net income of individuals after the payment of Federal income taxes, rather than the inequitable income taxes on lower groups proposed by President Truman."

Senator Hubert H. Humphreys (D., Minn.) told the Senate that an excess profits tax should be imposed as a measure to curb inflation, along with the income tax boosts recommended by the President.

"I urge immediate passage of a drastic excess profits tax on a retroactive basis," Representative Andrew J. Biemiller (D., Wis.) said.

Representative Noah H. Mason, of Illinois, Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee, demanded "equitable assessment" of the costs of the Korean war operations by the taxing of cooperatives and other alleged non-profit enterprises, now exempt from income taxes. He estimated that one billion dollars could be obtained from those sources if Congress had the courage to tax them.

Metal Needs For Highway Dept. Given

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young yesterday released estimates on metals needed to carry out District Highway Department work during the next two years.

Roadway maintenance, extension of New York ave. ne. to connect with the proposed Baltimore-Washington Parkway and the E. Capitol st. bridge will require 14,200 tons of ferrous metals, and 32 tons of aluminum and copper, he said, with the span taking 94 percent.

Gen. Young recently requested city department heads to report the amount of critical materials needed for proposed capital improvements.

Young disclosed the bridge contract probably will not be awarded until spring. He has advised the other Commissioners to withhold decision on starting the span for several months "when we will know better what the materials situation may be." Planning, however, will go ahead.

Young doubts the bridge will bear a defense priority tag, but feels it will be "highly desirable in peace or war". He has recommended continuing routine highway work since it involves such minute quantities of critical materials.

Government Asks Revocation Of Bridges' $25,000 Bail

San Francisco, July 31 (U.P.).—The Government asked today that Longshore Leader Harry Bridges, who is free on bail pending appeal of his perjury conviction, be jailed at once for activities "dangerous" to the public welfare and national security.

The motion, filed by the United States attorneys office in the Federal District Court of Judge George B. Harris, asked that the left-wing labor leader's $25,000 bail be revoked at once. Harris, who was presiding judge at Bridges' trial, ordered a hearing on the motion for Wednesday in his chambers.

If the court should grant the Government's motion, Bridges would be sent to a Federal prison at once to begin serving his five-year sentence for perjury-conspiracy. The president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union was convicted of lying at a 1945 naturalization hearing when he denied he was a Communist.

The Government's petition charged that since his conviction Bridges has "pursued and will continue to pursue . . . a course of conduct and activities dangerous and detrimental to the public welfare and inimical to the safety and national security of the United States of America."

Accompanying the petition was a 15-page file of affidavits and memoranda compiled during the past several weeks by Special Prosecutor F. Donohue on orders from the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The exhibits included copies of the San Francisco Communist Party organ, the Daily Peoples' World, alleged to show how Bridges has followed the Communist Party line since the start of the Korean war.

During the past week Bridges has been jeered down by several longshore locals, including his "home" local, which passed resolutions strongly supporting the United States and United Nations' actions in Korea.

Stock Brokers Lose Tax Fight

W. B. Hibbs & Co., stock brokers here, will have to pay the District unincorporated business franchise tax, the United States Court of Appeals decided yesterday.

The company claimed exemption from the tax under the law which exempts "any trade or business which by law, customs, or ethics, cannot be incorporate."

The company argued that "historically, stock brokerage has been conducted by individuals rather than corporations and that petitioners' principal source of business, the New York Stock Exchange, bars membership to corporations."

Commented the Appeals Court: "Although the present rules of the (New York Stock) Exchange make incorporation undesirable, they do not bring with them the conclusion that petitioners cannot incorporate within the meaning of the tax statute. If they wished to do so, they would find neither the general incorporation statute of the District of Columbia, specific statutes, nor a body of case law erect any barrier.

"As we understand the statute, it refers to customs in the technical sense—those having the force of law—such as the concepts of the law merchant which have been assimilated into our law of commercial transactions. Clearly included within the exemption because of "customs, or ethics" are lawyers and medical doctors . . . In contrast, stock brokerage is little different from any business whose activities are essentially those of agent for purchase and sale."

Appeals Court Denies Japs' 'Pauper' Plea

The United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that seven Japanese war criminals cannot make appeals in "forma pauperis" to the courts here.

The tribunal said that the right, which allows person to file pleadings without prepaying costs, is reserved for citizens of the United States only. The fact that the pleadings were made in the name of their lawyer does not change the facts, the court declared.

Attempting the free appeal were Sergt. Takeshi Hashimoto, Sergt. Hiroyuki Morita, Fukusaburo Adachi, Shohei Ikeda, Warrant Officer Mitsuzo Inagaki, Eiichi Ito, and Lieut. Kazuo Takenaka. All are in prison in Japan.

Reds Plan No War Now, Dulles Says

San Francisco, July 31 (U.P.).—John Foster Dulles said today he does not believe Soviet leaders have decided to start a third World War.

In a speech to the Commonwealth Club, Dulles said the Korean struggle "plainly indicates that (Communist leaders) are now willing to run greatly increased risks . . . but the leaders may not yet be prepared to make the fateful decision that would mean general war."

The Republican adviser to the State Department said 'it may be that the free world, by a show of resolution and strength, can bring the Soviet leaders to avoid that reckless course."

Dulles warned against letting Korea "monopolize our thoughts and actions and divert us from achieving vital political objectives elsewhere . . . We cannot afford to lose" in either Asia or Europe.

He urged that Japan be made an equal partner 'in the community of the free nations" so she can contribute to world peace and security.

Dulles charged that the Chinese Communist regime "openly preaches violence" and "encourages" North Korea's aggression. To admit Red China to the U. N., he said, would give them the right "to veto the peacemaking role of the Security Council." He urged that the U. N. veto be abolished.

The United States must switch its economy to a wartime footing immediately to cope with "the most formidable adversary in history," Dulles warned,

"The quicker we start, the better the chance that we can complete it before we are struck," Dulles said.

"Every dollar, every pound, every franc available should be devoted to providing the implements needed for the protection of the free world," he pointed out.

"The tanks now being used in Korea were begged from the Philippines government becaused we didn't have enough of our own to send," he asserted.

Dulles said that only $200 worth of American military aid reached Korea prior to the outbreak of hostilities.

Senate Asks for Aid in Korea As It Votes ECA $2,726,761,473

Virginia and Frear of Delware voted with 10 Republicans for the cut.

The Senate divided this way on the Hayden increase: For raising the ECA appropriation, 34 Democrats and eight Republicans. Against the increase, eight Democrats and 21 Republicans.

Later the Senate approved by a voice vote a committee amendment increasing Point Four appropriations for aid to backward areas to the $26,900,000 requested by the President. Originally the committee provided only 10 million dollars to launch the Point Four program, but later yielded to a personal appeal from Mr. Truman.

The Senate adopted these two other amendments:

By Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Ia.), the socalled French Morocco amendment, denying ECA aid to any country whose dependency violates a treaty with the United States. Aimed at alleged discrimination against American businessmen in Morrocco, the amendment was approved, 43 to 29.

By Senator Hayden, increasing funds to aid Arab refugees from Palestine by $2,745,000, to a total of $27,450,000. Approved by a voice vote.

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) sought to deny Marshall Plan funds to any country which exports goods to Russia and her satelites which could be put to military use. Wherry's amendment was defeated 39 to 33.

An amendment by Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.) to transfer ECA funds to the armed service appropriation was shouted down.

Although the ECA won its first test round in the war-conscious Senate, it still has two more hurdles to leap.

An amendment by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), earmarking 100 million dollars of ECA funds for Spain is slated for three hours of debate and a showdown today.

In addition, ECA could still be cut under the terms of the so-called Bridges-Byrd economy amendment, slashing all non-defense funds in the omnibus bill a horizontal 10 percent. Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) is leading an effort to exempt ECA from the projected over-all slash.

D. C. Chaplain Cut Off 4 Days Finds Way Back to His Outfit

Tokyo, Tuesday, Aug. 1 (U.P.).—"This is the way we did it in the last war."

With those words, Chaplain Arthur E. Mills jumped into a jeep and headed into the battle area, hunting a group of wounded Americans cut off by enemy troops.

The full details aren't available here, but it is known that hours later Mills came back to the headquarters of a First Cavalry Regiment with a jeep load of wounded soldiers.

Mills, 35, Santa Ana, Calif., is a chaplain captain and one of several score Army chaplains now with American forces in Korea. On the 175th anniversary of the organization of the Chaplain Corps they are braving every danger to provide spiritual comfort and aid to the wounded of the Nineteenth combatants and do not carry arms.

Chaplain Col. Ivan L. Bennett, Raleigh, N. C., chief of the chaplains in the Far East command, said two chaplains have been reported missing or killed in action.

Two chaplains were cut off from their regiment during the fight for Taejon. One, Capt. Carroll Chaphe, 33, Saunder St., Whitehall, N. Y., found his way back to the United States lines after three days. The other, Capt. Edward Dorsey, 3212 7th St., ne., Washington, D. C., spent four days in rejoining his outfit.

A headquarters release announced that Capt. Herman G. Felhoelter, Louisville, Ky., has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for "a valorous deed that was an inspiration to every member of the regiment."

He voluntarily remained behind to assist seriously wounded men who could not be evacuated during the Kum River battle. When last seen he still was administering to the wounded of the 19th In-Infantry Regiment of the Twenty-fourth Division.

Chaplain Capt. Kenneth C. Hyslop, Salisbury, Md., accompanied the walking wounded of the Nineteenth Regiment back through the Korean lines to safety. Another chaplain, whose name was withheld pending notification of next of kin, was killed in the front lines by a North Korean strafing attack.

Hyslop and Chaplain Francis C. Biel, 736 S. Curley st., Baltimore, made an eight-hour round trip over rugged mountains to reach a supply base and return with a trailer of bread after they learned that the men in a front line battalion were hungry for "real bread."

Sergeant Retires At Same Post After 30 Years

Fort Leavenworth, Kas., July 31 (AP).—Somebody say something about joining the Army and seeing the world?

Master Sergt. Ralph E. Hawkins, 51, retired today after serving 30 years, 5 months and 18 days in the Army—all at this post.

Hawkins has been the noncommissioned officer in charge of surgical service at the Station Hospital here. He was assigned to the hospital after his enlistment in 1920.

After a vacation he is going back to work at the same job as a civilian employe.

Sunday had believed the question finally was wrapped up.

They were standing for Leopold's signature to the draft agreement and a radio announcement to the nation.

It had been hoped the radio announcement would quiet the restless, divided nation teetering on the verge of civil war.

But Leopold's signature was not forthcoming. The hour for the broadcast passed without any word from the monarch.

Instead Leopold pointed out he wished to include the same ifs and buts in the agreement which deadlocked the government last April during discussions over his return from exile in Switzerland. Leopold did return 11 days ago, but Belgium has experienced nothing but riots and strikes since.

Sporadic rioting continued last night in the center of Brussels. A number of injured were taken to a hospital, including a reporter for the pro-Leopold newspaper Libre Belgique who was clubbed by a gendarme.

In one downtown street Le Soir, a conservative but anti-Leopold newspaper, was burned in heaps by angry crowds. The paper had prominently displayed a photograph of Baudouin.

At about that time reports began circulating that Premier Jean Duvieusart had been hastily summoned to Laeken Palace for another conference with the King.

Then as word of the new vexing complications became known reports trickled into Brussels that the much-publicized protest march on the capital had begun in some areas.

The projected march by anti-Leopold forces is scheduled to be held later today. It had been hoped that a firm settlement of the abdication question would result in a cancellation of the demonstration.

Throughout the negotiations in Parliament and at the palace leaders of the anti-Leopold movement have insisted that the King step aside completely and allow Baudouin to be the actual ruler.

KING GIVES IN—King Leopold of the Belgians, in the face of mounting rioting and violence over his return to the throne, yesterday said he would turn over his royal powers to his son, Crown Prince Baudouin. Saturday, huge crowds marched down main boulevards in Brussels, the Belgian capital, as a climax to strikes and demonstrations that had paralyzed the country's economy and threatened to bring about a civil war there

Ships of Eight Nations Are Aiding in Korea War

Tokyo, July 31 (AP).—Naval action in the Korean war has become a United Nations effort in every sense.

Vice Admiral Charles T. Joy, Far East naval forces commander, announced today that vessels of eight nations are operating in Korean waters.

He said Canada has sent two destroyers, New Zealand two frigates, The Netherlands one destroyer and France one frigate.

They joined a U. N. naval force whose core is made up of United States, British and Australian warships and the tiny but active South Korean navy.

In the air, the naval forces have been inactive for the past several days. After a series of successful strikes by carrier-baked planes working closely with ground and air forces, the carrier force returned to base for fuel and supplies, a headquarters spokesman said.

Smuggled Gems Seized

Manila, July 31 (AP).—Finance Secretary Pio Pedrosa said today the seizure of $200,000 in diamonds aboard an airplane Friday has uncovered a big-time international gem smuggling ring. He said arrests were expected soon.

2 Fined $50 Each On Liquor Charge

Two Alexandria men were fined $50 and given suspended sentences of 30 days each in Arlington County Court yesterday, after pleading guilty to charges of transporting liquor illegally.

They were Elmo J. Jackson, 26, 3915 Bruce st., and Carl Carter, 26, 1106 Wolfe st. They were arrested July 21 by Arlington Detective Russell Runyon and Virginia ABC Investigator M. K. Bryant, who said they found 24 half pints of whisky and three cases of beer, purchased in the District, in their car.

Area Merchants Reap Benefit Of District Decentralization

Washington area merchants have been trying hard to keep up with the decentralization of the District's population, Census figures indicate, and they are reaping the benefits of that policy.

Figures released by the Census Bureau show the population of the metropolitan area here increased from 967,985 to 1,452,349 between 1940 and 1950, or 50.04 percent.

A breakdown reveals the growth of the District itself amounted to nearly 20 percent, while the metropolitan area outside the District increased by more than 116 percent.

During a somewhat similar period, 1939 to 1948, the number of stores in the metropolitan area outside the District increased by 36.5 percent—while Washington itself had only 2.6 percent more stores at the end of that time, according to Census Bureau figures. Sales in the suburban area zoomed by 207 percent.

The Washington area's growth in the past 10 years has been topped only by the San Francisco area, whose population was up 51.42 percent. Metropolitan Los Angeles grew 48.50 percent.

Recount Is Refused In Oklahoma Runoff

Oklahoma City, July 31 (AP).—William O. Coe, defeated by Johnston Murray for the Democratic nomination for Governor last Tuesday by 1009 votes, today was denied a recount and immediately appealed to the State Supreme Court.

The State Election Board unanimously ruled that Oklahoma does not have a law providing for a recount of a runoff primary.

Bill to Help Families Of Atrocity Victims

The families of American prisoners of war slain by Korean Reds after capture would be awarded $10,000 under a bill introduced in the House by Representative McGuire (D., Conn.).

"While we hope and pray that our enemy will soon subscribe to the rules of warfare, we must nevertheless do something for our boys and their families under these ruthless practices," McGuire told the House.

Reports from the Korean front have noted numerous incidents of American soldiers being bound and then shot to death after being taken prisoners.

McGuire introduced another bill extending the War Claims Act for payment of $1 a day to Americans taken prisoner in the Korean conflict. This provision applied to American POWs in the last war. The McGuire bill would also apply to GIs in hiding to avoid capture.

Hero Had Aid of 'Lord, Plenty of Ammunition'

Boaz, Ala., July 31 (AP).—Lieut. Jim W. Harris, recommended for the Congressional Medal of Honor, went into the Korean fighting with "the Lord on his side, plus plenty of ammunition."

Parents of the fighting American infantryman quoted from a letter written July 12 as he moved up to the front.

Harris led a volunteer squad that knocked out five machine guns, killed between 20 and 40 North Koreans, captured two Russian-type telephones and collected 18 automatic weapons.

"He is a good Christian boy and has always tried to do the right thing," his father, a retired postal worker, said.

"He told us that the Lord was on his side, plus plenty of ammunition," the elder Harris said. "He told us that 'you can't beat a combination like that.'"

First Korea War Dead Arrive at Hushed Pier

Seattle, July 31 (AP).—There was no celebrating, cheering crowd on the Seattle port of embarkation dock this morning when the transport Gen. E. T. Collins arrived.

The ship's flag was half-masted; so were the flags on ships berthed nearby. Rows of white-helmeted soldiers stood at attention and saluted; longshoremen and civilian workers uncovered.

A hush had settled over the piers when a flag-draped coffin swung out of the ship's hold on a white pallet. Another coffin followed. That was all.

Slowly, a waiting funeral truck drove away through the silent soldiers and civilians.

America's first Army dead from the Korean war had returned to their native soil.

Thailand Volunteers For Korea Are Asked

Bangkok, Thailand, July 31 (U.P.)—The Ministry of Defense issued a call today for volunteers for a Thailand expeditionary force to fight in Korea.

Recruiting stations are being set up in every province by the government. The first to open enrolled over 100 officers and men in less than two hours.

75,000 Puerto Ricans Seen Eager to Fight

Up to 75,000 Puerto Ricans are eager to volunteer for action with United Nations ground forces in Korea, Resident Commissioner Antonio Fernos-Isern said yesterday.

Fernos, the island commonwealth's representative in Congress, said a recent trip home convinced him "an army of no less than 75,000 could be raised in Puerto Rico without resorting to the draft."

The island, with a population of 2,200,000, furnished slightly less than that number of men for United States armies in World War II.

Actually, Puerto Ricans are United States citizens and fighting men from the island would serve with United States troops in Korea.

Iraq Unable to Send Any Troops to Korea

Baghdad, July 31 (AP)—Authoritative sources reported tonight that Iraq has notified the U. N. Secretary General that "in view of internal conditions and difficulties, Iraq is in no position to send troops to Korea."

Camouflaging Engine Fails to Save Train

Tokyo, July 31 (U.P.)—There is—or was—a North Korean railroad engineer who seemed to follow the legendary ostrich tradition that if the head is hidden, the body will be invisible, a headquarters spokesman announced today.

F-80 jet pilots, ranging over the enemy territory, sighted a locomotive that was carefully camouflaged with trees and brush, pulling a train that was not camouflaged. Engine and train were knocked out.

Bureau Seeks Word Of Captive Americans

Tokyo, July 31 (U.P.)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur set up a bureau today to seek information of American war prisoners in the hands of the North Koreans. At the same time an international Red Cross delegate, Frederick Bieri, of Geneva, arrived to check on American treatment of North Korean captives.

"A prisoner of war information bureau has been established as a branch of the general headquarters provost marshal section," MacArthur said in Korean release No. 173. "This bureau works under the provisions of the Geneva Convention of 1949 as collector of information about any United States citizen who may be in the hands of the North Koreans. The section is headed by Maj. H. A. Carnes, with assistance by Mrs. Augusta Kraus."

Reds Drive for Pusan

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

SOUTH KOREAN FRONT—Red invaders have broken through United States defense lines to take Chinju (A) after a three-day battle. On the central front, the Reds are pushing a three-way drive at Kumchon (B), key town on the main supply line from Pusan. The situation was not clear in the Hamchang-Yechon sector (C) as United States and South Korean troops tried to bolster their lines. Reds still are holding Yongdok (D). Arc, with 50-mile radius from Pusan, indicates how near Reds have struck to that all-important supply port

So. Korean Police Plan Drive on Red Guerillas

Somewhere in Korea, July 31 (AP). South Korean police today began organizing defense units to help the American Army combat Red guerilla bands operating behind Eighth Army lines.

Home Minister Cho Pyung Ok said the plan had full approval of Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commanding general of the Eighth Army.

Cho said arms and ammunition for police antiguerilla units are coming from General MacArthur's headquarters. Arms are needed immediately for 10,000 police, and ultimately for 25,000 men, Cho said.

5 Foreign Ministers To Confer at The Hague

The Hague, Netherlands, July 31 (U.P.)—Foreign Ministers of the five Brussels Pact nations will discuss European defense measures here Tuesday in a closed three-hour conference.

Britain's Ernest Bevin, Robert Schuman of France, Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium, Dirk Stikker of Holland and Joseph Bech of Luxembourg will meet.

The conference was officially described as a regular quarterly meeting, but reliable sources said the ministers would discuss European defense problems in the light of the Korean war.

Red Arms Cache Found

Singapore, July 31 (U.P.)—A Communist arms cache, including 40,000 rounds of ammunition, was discovered today by British troops in the Malayan jungles.

Freighter Disabled By Engine Trouble

Norfolk, Va., July 31 (AP).—Engine trouble disabled the freighter Belgian Victory totday 110 miles south-southeast of Chesapeake lightship. The Coast Guard cutter Cherokee was dispatched to her assistance and was expected to reach her position at 9:25 p. m.

Under charter to the American Hawaiian Steamship Co., the freighter was out of New York for the West Coast.

Circus Cuts Road Tour Because of Korea War

Rochester, N. Y., July 31 (U.P.)—The Cole Bros. circus is cutting short its summer road tour because of the Korean war.

The show opened here today, but representatives announced it would play only two more dates because of war-influenced attendance declines. It will play in Bloomsburg, Pa., and St. Louis. It will set up winter quarters in St. Louis, officials said.

Changes Urged In Life Insurance

The House Executive Committee recommended yesterday that the Government stop selling life insurance to servicemen and grant free death benefits instead.

The adoption of such a program would have the effect of abolishing the National Service Life Insurance now handled by the Veterans Administration.

A committee report pointed out that existing Federal insurance policies are binding contracts and that "no changes can or should be made" in them.

The report was based on a nine-month study of the Governments' insurance program which members said was too costly and difficult to administer.

Four States Vote Today in Primaries

In Senate Probe

E. St. Louis Officials Questioned

By The Associated Press

President Truman's influence as a vote getter rides on the outcome of the Missouri Democratic Senatorial primary today.

Kansas, Virginia and West Virginia also hold their primaries today, with Tennessee voting Thursday and Kentucky Saturday.

In the big Missouri race, Mr. Truman has come out strongly for Emery W. Allison of Rolla, a veteran State senator. Considerable grass roots strength, however, is reported to have built up behind former Congressman Thomas C. Hennings, jr., of St. Louis, and a tight battle was in prospect.

Hennings has sought to make an issue of "Pendergastism' and has criticized the President's intervention in the campaign.

3 Oppose Donnell

Allison and Hennings, along with three other Democrats, are trying to win nomination to the seat now held by Senator Forrest C. Donnell, Republican. Donnell is expected to get the GOP nomination with little trouble, although he has three opponents.

Both a Senate seat and the governship are at stake in the Kansas voting, with interest centered on the latter race, largely because Alf M. Landon, 1936 GOP presidential nominee, has taken a hand in it.

For governor, Landon is supporting Willard Mayberry, his former secretary. Gov. Frank Carlson and Senator Harry Darby have teamed up behind Edward F. Arn, former Kansas Attorney General.

The winner—provided he is elected in November—gets to name the Republican State chairman and thus control the State party machinery in advance of the 1952 Presidential nominating convention. Landon at present is on the outside looking in, but hopes for better things if Mayberry comes through.

Darby Bows Out

Darby, who was appointed Senator by Carlson upon the death of Senator Clyde Reed, isn't running this time. Carlson himself is trying for the Senate nomination, and is opposed by Harry W. Colmery, former national commander of the American Legion.

In the Kansas Democratic primary, Paul Aiken, former Assistant Postmaster General, is running against National Committeeman Carl Rice for the Senate nomination.

Four of Kansas' six Republican House members have opposition in the primary. In Missouri, the 12 Democratic and 1 Republican Representatives are running for renomination, but 7 of them, including Dewey Short, the lone Republican, have no opposition in today's election.

In West Virginia, former United States Senator Rush D. Holt, now a State legislator, has switched parties and is trying for a seat in the House of Representatives at Washington in the Republican primary. Democrats now hold all six seats from West Virginia.

The Senate Crime Investigating Committee spent five hours yesterday delving into East St. Louis, Ill., gambling.

Questioned in an executive session at the Capitol were John T. English, city police commissioner for the past 13 years, and Leo J. Dougherty, a former commissioner who now is Democratice State treasurer.

Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.) told reporters English denied receiving any pay-offs for the open gambling in his town and Dougherty denied receiving any political contributions from gamblers or other racketeers. The Senator said Dougherty, a well-to-do contractor, accounted for his wealth through normal business transactions.

Both men denied any connection with Louis (Red) Smith and Frank (Buster) Wortman, a pair of notorious racketeers. Wortman is an East St. Louis resident, on parole from Leavenworth Penitentiary. English said he had heard Wortman had some connection with one of the city's 200 bars but that the license was in another man's name. Much of the city's revenue comes from the bar licenses which cost $1000 each annually.

The Senator told reporters both men had twice been indicted by a grand jury for allowing open gambling but that the first indictment was dismissed because of a technicality. The second one was also dismissed, as was an indictment of the district attorney who drew the first one. He was charged with conspiring to have it thrown out by having it faultily drawn. English declared yesterday the indictments were the doings of political enemies, Kefauver said.

English was questioned as to the reason for open gambling in East St. Louis. He said the city of more than 80,000 had only 60 police.

Questioned about the activities in his city of the C. J. Rich firm, which solicited horse race bets through Western Union employes in at least 19 States, English said he had been advised there was no case against the firm because it maintained only a postoffice box in the Illinois city.

Kefauver said the firm did a gross business of around $20,000 a day, paying the Western Union employes a 25 percent commission for taking the bets.

English also said he didn't think St. Louis "betting commissioner" James J. Carroll, who recently said he was going out of business, was violating any law in Illinois. But Kefauver told reporters Carroll and an associate had been going "full blast" in Illinois. He also said "a considerable number of records were torn up" just before Senate investigators arrived at the East St. Louis office.

Kefauver announced that the committee hopes to have open hearings in St. Louis and Kansas City next month, then clean up loose ends of the Florida situation at a Washington hearing. The committee also intends to go to both Chicago and Philadelphia before long, he added. Warren Olney, counsel of the California Crime Committee, will come here to testify at an open hearing about August 15.

The Senator said the committee may soon have hearings on possible black market activities by racketeers with pocketsful of loose cash. He said no major evidence was yet available on such activities in the current inflation period but he added that some "rather startling" cases from the last war may be made public as a guide to the public of what might occur.

Tobey Asks Gambling Probe in New England

Concord, N. H., July 31 (U.P.)—Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) opened his campaign for reelection today by disclosing he has asked for a Federal investigation of alleged widespread gambling in New England.

Tobey, who will be opposed in the primary by Wesley Powell of North Hampton, said he believed the illicit gambling activities were concentrated in southern New England, particularly around Boston.

The ranking GOP member of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee said Federal authorities had been checking underworld activities in New England as far back as 1943.

"But I'm sorry to say that political figures began to be involved and the probe was sidetracked," Tobey told newsmen during a press conference called to open his campaign.

"I have asked that a thorough investigation of the Boston area be made at once, regardless of the political figures involved," Tobey said.

Liquor Prices Cut on Newest Virginia List

Richmond, Va., July 31 (AP).—The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board's new price list—featuring price cuts—goes into effect Tuesday.

In addition, the State liquor stores are supplementing their stocks with the cheapest bottled-in-bond bourbon since 1944. The brand—new to ABC shelves—retails at $3.50 a fifth and $2.20 a pint.

Decreases on the 20 products will range from a nickel a pint to $1.30 a fifth. The sharp lowering will send the price of a popular bottled-in-bond bourbon from $5.90 to $4.60 a fifth.

Three price boosts accompany the reductions. Two of the hikes affect another bottled-in-bond bourbon brand. It will jump from $3.80 to $4.60 a pint and from $6.10 to $7.35 a fifth.

The third increase will send a brand of Planter's Punch from $4.50 to $4.55 a fifth.

Jury to Hear Gold; New Arrests Likely

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
MISS MIRIAM MOSKOWITZ, leaving Federal Court in New York after adjournment of hearing on charge of conspiring to obstruct justice in atom-spy investigation, frames window sticker with American flag and "Our Country" written on it. Hearing was set over until Wednesday

New York, July 31 (NYHT)—Harry Gold, confessed atom spy for Russia, will go before a brand new federal grand jury in New York Tuesday and give further information that is almost certain to lead to the indictment of additional persons. Another willing witness before the same August panel will be David Greenglass, also under indictment as an alleged Soviet spy.

Only last Saturday, Gold, 39-year-old, Philadelphia scientist, testified before a hurriedly reconvened grand jury in United States Court House at Foley Square. Mostly on the basis of his word, Abraham Brothman, Queens chemical engineer, and Miss Miriam Moskowitz, described as a Brothman business associate in running a New Jersey chemical factory, were indicted and arrested Saturday. They were charged with conspiring to obstruct justice.

Arraignment of Brothman, 36, and Miss Moskowitz, 34, was postponed today until Wednesday. Both were held in $25,000 bail each. Their pleading to the indictment was adjourned at the request of Miss Moskowitz's brother, Sylvan, who told Judge T. Hoyt Davis that he was unable to reach the lawyer he wanted.

Another arraignment scheduled for today but put off until August 15 was that of Julius Rosenberg, 32-year-old former Army Signal Corps technician. United States Attorney Irving H. Saypol told United States Commissioner Edward F. McDonald:

"This case is still the subject intensive investigation. There are intensive ramifications which I am not free to disclose. . . . We are getting more information every

U.S. Urged To Double Its School Funds

Chicago, July 31 (AP).—Roy E. Larsen, president of Time, Inc., said today "our schools are in serious trouble." He urged that Americans double their spending for schools within a few years.

Larsen is president of the National Citizens Commission for Public Schools. He said:

"Our schools are in serious trouble from lack of facilities, finances, teachers—lack of everything." He addressed the National Audio-Visual Association Convention. Delegates are associted with groups interested in educational films.

He said the greatest need is for "citizen education"—the give-and-take of parents, school officials and taxpayers. He urged that last year's five-billion-dollar school bill should be boosted by one billion dollars now. It eventually may reach 10 billion dollars, he said.

Nearly 10 billion dollars is also needed for new school building, he said.

Jobholder Total Hits Record High Of 52,774,000

The number of Americans with jobs, outside of farm work, reached a record high of 52,774,000 in the first week of July. The previous peak was 52,452,000 in July, 1948.

Announcing the new figure yesterday, Secretary of Commerce Sawyer made this comment:

"It should be noted that, with the Nation again approaching full employment, it may be necessary once more to find ways to expand our labor force to permit the increased industrial production and strengthening of the armed forces requested by the President."

Aides said Sawyer had no thought of "manpower controls" in making that statement. They said he was "merely" making a general observation.

The monthly employment report prepared by the Census Bureau said the number of job-seeking unemployed—a measure of the immediately available pol of manpower—shrank 171,000 to a 3,213,000 total in early July.

Manslaughter Charged to GI

A charge of manslaughter was added against a Fort Meade soldier yesterday who, police said, fought with a Laurel, Md., man several hours before the latter died Sunday.

The soldier, Sergt. John J. Mahoney, jr., 30, earlier was charged by Maryland State Police with assault and battery. Fatally injured in the fight was Victor Chesnoski, a gasoline station attendant.

Cavalry Puts Torch to Huts To Stem Reds

By O. H. P. King

With U. S. First Cavalry in Korea, July 31 (AP).—First Cavalry foot troopers put the torch to hundreds of thatched roof huts in front-line areas today in a desperate move to halt Red Korean infiltrations.

Smoke spiraled high above the front. Haze hung over the valleys, hiding targets from low-flying United States observation planes.

The firing of South Korean villages was a scorched-earth measure to destroy hiding places for guerillas such as the commandos who raided a command post today.

It also struck at cover where North Koreans hid tanks.

The pre-dawn commando raiders killed one Korean and four American officers and wounded eight Americans. They poked Russian "grease guns" through blackout curtains on the windows of the schoolhouse command post and sprayed the interior.

Five Red raiders were killed. Between 10 and 15 escaped.

The First Cavalry pulled back in the Kumchon area because of heavy Red pressure that exposed the division's left flank.

The Communists had driven south of the First Calvary into Chirye, 11 miles southwest of Kumchon.

This created the threat that a northward thrust would outflank the division and block the main supply route leading southeast to Taegu and Pusan.

American troops attacked Chirye to drive out the Reds this morning but a North Korean counter-attack drove them northwards. Then the Reds pulled out of the town. Chiyre tonight was a no-man's land between the two forces.

Intelligence reports from North Korean prisoners said the American attack on Chirye had thrown the Red timetable off schedule.

2 Bands to Play With Symphony On L'Enfant Night

The National Symphony Orchestra, augmented by two brass bands, and the Sesquicentennial Chorus, will assemble tonight at 6 o'clock at the Watergate for a final rehearsal of Hector Berlioz's symphony, "Requiem."

The symphony is to be presented Wednesday and Thursday as a Sesquicentennial-sponsored tribute to Maj. Pierre L'Enfant, designer of the Nation's Capital, on the 196th anniversary of his birth. Rehearsing tonight will be probably the largest number of musicians and singers ever to play together in Washington.

Among officials scheduled to attend Wednesday is the Ambassador of France, Henri Bonnet, who will have as his guest Miss Denise L'Enfant, a great-great-grandniece of Major L'Enfant.

D. C. Man Dies of Injuries

Jones told police the accident occurred early in the morning when his car was forced off the road by another car and crashed into a concrete bridge off Route 211 about 5 miles east of Warrenton.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said Butler died of head injuries. He issued a temporary certificate of accidental death, pending completion of an investigation by Virginia State Police.

Indifferent Primary

With the exception of the Arlington swimming pool issue, little interest has been aroused in today's voting in nearby Virginia. In the case of the Eighth District congressional primaries, which are the main feature, this lack of interest inevitably plays into the hands of the incumbent Democrat, Representative Howard W. Smith. He faces the same opponent whom he defeated in the 1948 primary, Arnold F. Souther. The Republican race is between Tyrrell Krum, who ran against Smith in the 1948 general election, and Hal Flood Hughes, an Arlington real estate man. What the lethargic campaign demonstrates is that the talk among progressives about the need to concentrate on a strong candidate to oppose Mr. Smith in the Democratic Party has evaporated. The only chance of a real contest will come if the Republicans decide to make a determined fight for Mr. Smith's seat in the November election.

About the best that can be said of the swimming pool bond issue in Arlington is that it is for a worthy but nonessential purpose. It is being presented to voters as a $500,000 bond authorization for a self-liquidating project. There is serious doubt whether bonds could be sold at favorable enough rates to construct self-liquidating pools—at least at attendance prices which most families could pay. Beyond this, however, the pool issue is, so to speak, placing dessert before bread. Arlington needs a great many things recreationally; for example, it is short of parks. Moreover, there are large capital expenditures staring it in the face. Another school bond issue to provide minimum educational facilities is imminent, and very shortly Arlington is going to have to do something drastic about its sewage disposal problem. Thus, even if the swimming pool authorization is approved on the questionable theory that it will not cost taxpayers anything, it will only serve to focus attention on Arlington's more basic needs.

Win Or Die

In his "win or die" order to American forces in Korea, Lieut. Gen. Walton Walker undoubtedly sought as much to shock the people at home as to stiffen the fighting spirit of his troops. The situation is undeniably serious. With American and South Korean units being pushed closer to Pusan, there is precious little space left with which to buy time. Possibly there were a few green soldiers who expected that they somehow could be evacuated if worst came to worst; but for the most part the troops must know precisely what they are up against. It is imperative for Americans at home to know, too. The Walker order is not a signal of imminent defeat. It is, however, an acknowledgment that although some additional abandonments may still be expected, withdrawals are nearing the defense perimeter around Pusan which must be held if a toehold in Korea is to be maintained.

What has happened so far is in no way a disgrace. As Prime Minister Menzies of Australia noted yesterday, the defensive is the most difficult part of war. But in general the retreats have been planned and they have been orderly. There was no hope that Americans and South Koreans could do much more than delay numerically superior Communist invaders until they reached a defense line short enough to enable them to concentrate units in strength. Incidentally, the part played by the South Koreans has received far too little attention—possibly because of an understandable preoccupation of news reporters with the activities of American troops. The five remaining South Korean divisions have been holding a large portion of the line.

Distance and supply difficulties, not to mention rough terrain and inexperienced troops, have made the job of the defenders a tough one. With the arrival of the Second Division, four American divisions, though understrength, have been landed in Korea in a little more than five weeks, and a Marine contingent is due any day. Air support, while still not geared perfectly to ground operations, has been strong and air superiority was attained early. The Navy not only has patrolled the sea, but also has contributed heavily in air strikes and has shelled the coast effectively. These are not negligible accomplishments for a country which has maintained no ready police force for this type of action and which had built its defense forces around a totally different strategic assumption.

The announcement yesterday that four National Guard divisions, two Guard regimental combat teams and two reserve Marine Air Squadrons are being called up serves to emphasize the formidable threat still posed by Communist manpower. It also emphasizes the determination to support General Walker with the additional men and materials that the long road back surely will require.

Chiang's Strike

Any hope that the mere presence of the Seventh Fleet in Formosan waters would put a stop to Chiang Kai-shek's mainland raids has gone glimmering. He has just launched an air strike against the island of Quemoy, off Amoy, and it is part of the Province of Fukien. Chiang's action is thus a contravention of his acceptance of President Truman's statement of June 26: "As a corollary to this action [the neutralization of Formosa] I am calling upon the Chinese government on Formosa to cease all air and sea operations against the mainland." The President added no qualification of any kind. He said nothing to support the Associated Press dispatch from Formosa which, after recording the Quemoy raid, added that "United States officials have said, however, that purely defensive Nationalist actions are not banned." This is, of course, implicit as regards a landing or an attack from the mainland, but there is nothing "purely defensive" about a strike across the 100-mile strait.

Chiang's action is all of a piece with his larger strategy. It should be obvious even to the meanest intelligence that Chiang Kai-shek's last hope is to reinvolve this country in China's civil war. This is the way to do it. Make America look like a "paper tiger," and thus embolden, as well as justify, a Chinese Communist assault. It is to be hoped it was the Quemoy affair that induced General MacArthur to fly to Formosa, for his duty is to insist upon the strict adherence to the Truman statement. Its integrity has been impaired by the nose-thumbing action of Chiang Kai-shek, and the only way to undo the damage is to see that Chiang steps down, and to take such other measures as will put an end to Nationalist mischief-making.

New Test Of The U. N.

In some respects even more momentous than the outcome of the fighting in Korea is the question of whether the return today of Jacob A. Malik, Soviet delegate to the Security Council, will immobilize the United Nations. Was the historic moment in which the Security Council organized resistance to the aggression in Korea only a freak? Will the U. N. now retire into impotence because of the Russian veto? It is clear that the forthright action initiated by the U. N. on June 25 and 27 cannot be reversed by any veto. But what of the future? Must free peoples sit helplessly by and let aggressors crush one nation after another because one big power can prevent positive action in the Council? There is no escape from the fact that the future of mankind is intimately bound up with the answers to these questions.

Yesterday a good beginning was made. Acting shortly before Mr. Malik demanded that the admission of Communist China to the United Nations be placed at the top of the Security Council agenda, the United States submitted a resolution condemning North Korea for its continued aggression, calling upon all countries to urge the North Koreans to cease their defiance of the U. N. and asking all countries to help keep the conflict localized. Thanks to the forehandedness of the Americans, this main issue has priority over the Soviet diversionary maneuver.

Mr. Malik's return, however, is not without some hopeful aspects. The reversal of Soviet policy which it represents is a tribute to the power that the U. N. managed to attain in his absence. Russia now feels the need to reassociate herself with the international mechanism for the maintenance of peace. Beyond this, Mr. Malik's presence may be advantageous in settling the Korean war when the aggressors have quit and withdrawn. The interests of world peace demand that, divided though they are, the East and West continue to discuss their problems and to seek the settlement of basic differences. Let it not be the forces of freedom that cease talking and negotiating for the avoidance of World War III. While this door is being kept open, however, realism compels the free and nonaggressive powers to assume that the Soviet Union is taking the presidency of the Security Council today for obstructive purposes, and they must be prepared to cope with any monkey wrench that may be thrown into the machinery of collective security.

It is unthinkable that the moral uplift and spiritual cohesiveness evoked by the Korean episode should be lost. Having embarked upon a high-minded course of combating aggression, the U. N. could not crumple before a single nation's veto without spreading cynicism, hopelessness and chaos throughout the world. And the United Nations is all of us. It has acquired teeth by the assumption of responsibility by 52 nations to combine in the fight against aggression in Korea. They must continue working together, as Prime Minister Menzies of Australia said in Washington yesterday, "so that there will be as much power behind the forces of freedom as there is behind the forces of darkness." And, of course, this means that the U. N. must not lose its capacity for prompt and decisive action in the face of any aggressive challenge.

Fortunately, the founders of the U. N. recognized that on some occasions the Security Council might not be able to function effectively. However, they did not contemplate paralysis. On the contrary, they wrote into Article II authority for the General Assembly to "discuss any question relating to the maintenance of international peace and security brought before it by any member of the United Nations, or by the Security Council . . ." In such circumstances the Assembly "may make any recommendations with regard to any such questions to the state or states concerned or to the Security Council or to both." Furthermore, the Assembly may "establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions." To be sure, it must refrain from making recommendations in regard to any dispute actively before the Security Council, but when the Council finds itself helpless it can always pass its problem over to the Assembly as a procedural matter against which the veto does not operate.

If fighting aggression on the basis of mere "recommendations" seems a weak reed on which to rely, we must remember that this was the basis of the Security Council's action in the case of Korea. The Council did not send its own military forces into action, for it had no such forces. It merely "recommended" to U. N. members, under Article 39 of the Charter, that they send contingents of their national forces to the aid of South Korea. This sort of action can be initiated as readily by the Assembly as by the Council if there is the same will on the part of the U. N. members to respond.

If the Council is hamstrung by the veto, therefore, the Assembly ought to be prepared to carry the ball. This may require reactivation of the "Little Assembly" or in the case of any further act of aggression, a special meeting of the Assembly. But there seems to be no doubt that the machinery of the Assembly can be successfully used to halt aggression so long as the free world remains united in purpose. The chance for avoiding a general war will be greatly improved, in our opinion, if the antiaggression powers let it be known at once that no tangle in the Council will be permitted to thwart the policy upon which the U. N. has embarked.

Enough Steel?

Although the military program will eventually require heavy tonnages of steel, steel officials say that the initial 10-billion-dollar arms program recommended by the President will not entail a large immediate drain on steel supplies. They also point out that shipbuilding and plant construction took between a third and a half of all the steel used for military purposes during World War II. Comparatively little steel will be needed for such purposes; more than 2000 ships are laid up, and a large amount of unused plant capacity is left over from the last war. Nevertheless, any sizable increases in military demands require offsetting reductions in civilian consumption, since the industry is already straining its productive capacity. The only question is how great the reductions have to be, and how the reduced supplies should be allocated among competing civilian industries.

With steel demand outstripping supply, an expansion of production facilities is also essential. However, neither Stuart Symington, head of the National Security Resources Board, nor Secretary of Commerce Sawyer sees any need for Government construction or operation of steel plants—a proposal that was being seriously considered by the Administration a year and a half ago. In its midyear Economic Report the President's Council of Economic Advisers contents itself with saying that "further expansion of the steel industry would be good business even in an entirely peacetime context. The only effect of the present international situation is to make that expansion more urgent. To assume that this accelerated expansion should not be undertaken, because it might exceed the need if international tensions should subside, would neglect the vital need of today. It would be unrealistic when measured by the standards of desirable and attainable peacetime growth for the economy as a whole."

The steel industry evidently shares the council's view, for it has not only increased its productive capacity markedly since the end of the war, but has just announced plans for a further increase in capacity of five million tons by the end of 1952. With production currently at record levels these planned additions to output should suffice to meet all military and essential civilian needs. Moreover, through the improvement and enlargement of existing plants, steel production can be stepped up much more rapidly than would be possible by relying altogether upon the construction of new plants, either by the Government or by private industry.

STARS AND ROCKETS

We watched one night
While over the town
A snake of light
Rose on its tail
And fell down,
And a cluster of stars
Burst out of a sack
And rolled green fire
Across the bars
Where the clouds were black.

And we thought how we
All play at God
With a rocketing star
(Or two or three)
That rise but a rod.
(For a rocket glows
As a rocket will—
Or a song, or a hope
That stands on its toes—
Then all is still).

So we crawled into bed
With a sigh and a yawn
While a congress of stars
Convened overhead
And laughed till dawn.

Midcentury Conference

Your issue of July 28 carried a news story that greatly shocked us as young people. This story stated that the D. C. Committee for the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth had been forced to stop its active program for lack of funds.

This conference is called every 10 years by the President to discuss the problems to America's youth in such fields as education, health, spiritual life, family life and recreation. The D. C. committee has been trying to make the local report for the national meeting.

Truly, the results of this profitable study of the problems relating to our future citizenry are as important as those of spending dollars, products of war and military forces. Why not spend some money in the interest of a better world and country through better young people by helping and supporting with adequate funds that work of the D. C. Committee on the Midcentury Conference on Children and Youth?

Military Training

Bernard M. Baruch is right. The United States should set up immediate and complete economic mobilization. Rationing, ceilings on wages, prices and rents should be established at once.

This is no ordinary emergency of short duration. It is a global situation that is likely to run for 100 years before the final showdown comes. There will be worse conditions arising within the next five years. The coming spring will mark the beginning of a particularly evil period for this country. The time to act is now.

In all previous emergencies, the United States has been caught unprepared. Initial disaster was always the rule. After blundering its way along, the Nation finally got into full gear and eventually won at a tremendous cost in lives and money. Then, after success, the Nation drifted back into shameful unpreparedness that invited the recurrence of disaster.

The United States needs the immediate establishment of permanent universal military service as a national defense necessity. Spasmodic selective service is not the answer. There should be a minimum of two million young men in training every year, after which they should be placed in reserve, with a new contingent in training.

The country has been hypnotized into a false sense of security by the atomic weapon and the possible hydrogen bomb. Neither is capable of winning a war by itself. The infantry is the fighting arm. Atomic bombs, aircraft, artillery and other factors are merely auxiliaries to the infantry. We need and must have more and better infantry on hand at all times.

"Abstinence"

Mr. Clarence M. Zens, in his letter of July 26, states that the Catholic Church believes that God will always place at man's disposal the means to sustain himself, and thus they disapprove of methods of birth control. Do they think that man's efforts to sustain himself through prevention of over population, a manifestation of man's reasoning ability, lies outside the realm of God-given means?

Mr. Zens suggests that instead of couples who want more children thinking of the good of society, that society should think of the good of the couples who want more children. I believe that most of us realize that reproduction of any animal, man included, does not take place primarily for the purpose of reproducing the race. Society exists as a means of serving the individual through collective effort. The society cannot function most efficiently if the individual does not concern himself with his personal obligations to that society.

Mr. Zens states that the Catholic Church is opposed to contraception on the ground that it violates nature's law. Nature's law, which has given man the sexual drive, is also the law which has given man the desire to reason for ways in which he can improve his lot on earth.

Man has a desire to eliminate ignorance and poverty from his race. Birth control has become widely accepted as a means of accomplishing that desire, whether or not it is to the advantage of any particular segment of mankind to prevent it.

Alaska Land Rights

Extending statehood to our territorial populations in Alaska and Hawaii is a wise and just move which will undoubtedly prove a gain for American democracy in the eyes of the world. Unfortunately, however, if statehood for Alaska involves an assault upon the land rights of the aboriginal population, the prestige of our country will not gain, but will in fact suffer a serious blow.

There is danger that that is about to happen. The current Alaska statehood bill, H. R. 331, in the form in which it is being considered by the Senate, includes the provision in its Section 5, Part L:

"Pending action by the people of Alaska and the Congress as provided in this act, no reservations for use and occupancy by the natives of Alaska shall be designated in the Territory by authority of any law of the United States."

This repeals an act of 1936 under which the Department of the Interior was authorized to negotiate with the Aleut, Eskimo and Indian people of Alaska confirmations of title to possession of their lands and resources. This was in fulfillment of a promise of the United States made in the 1867 Treaty of Cession by which we acquired Alaska.

Such a repeal at this time is an outright default in our commitment to a defenseless, non-Caucasian minority. In the bill, it is phrased as temporary, but temporizing, postponement, and delays have been the weapons used since 1867 to prevent confirmation of Alaskan native land rights.

Confirmation of Aleut, Eskimo, and Indian people of Alaska to ownership of the lands they now occupy and use is just, and it is very long overdue. The price of full democracy for all Alaskans—including the natives, now 40 percent of the territorial population—must not be a sell-out of native land rights.

Security Risks

In his column of July 25, Marquis Childs says, "There were in 1946 and 1947 some 'bad security risks' in the State Department, who were for the most part misfits in other ways, too. They were removed. That is past." Mr. Childs is in the embarrassing position of at one and the same time attacking Senator McCarthy for persistently sticking with his aim of arousing the public to the internal danger and admitting that some of his statements must be correct.

If such risks were placed in Government service and continued until 1946 and 1947, why in heaven's name were they put there in the first place and who was responsible? Are those people who were responsible still in authority? I bet a dollar to a doughnut they are still there.

The lawmakers in Washington do not realize the uneasiness among the general public about leftism in Washington. Anyone who raised his head and squawked was pilloried. I am not claiming that Senator McCarthy pursued his attack carefully, but one thing that has come out of it is admission by such people as Mr. Childs that at one time such a situation existed. We have no assurance it does not exist today.

Those of us living abroad are sensitive to the remarks of the American press. We appreciate your concern for the welfare of the Philippines, but wish at times that you were better informed.

Your comment of June 5, on Judge Jorge Bocobo is a case in point: "Now the commission is headed by a former university president and legislator who gives little promise of getting to the bottom of the scandals."

Apparently you do not know Judge Bocobo, one of the half dozen truly eminent men of the Philippines, perhaps the best informed of them all and surely one of the most honest. Judge Bocobo has served the government for 40 years as well as being one of its most distinguished educators. He was president of the University of the Philippines at one time. Prior to that time he was dean of its law school.

He was the prewar cabinet Minister of Education. He has been a justice of the Supreme Court. He has just completed successfully the complete revision of the Civil Code and is currently the head of the Criminal Code Commission. Short On Defense

In the present important debate on the Korean crisis, Representative Dewey Short should have the grace to keep silent. Some of us remember the critical days of 1945-46 when he spearheaded the Communist-applauded disintegration of our military might. We have not forgotten his opposition to every plan for maintaining an adequate defensive force or for training the youth of America to protect themselves and their country in case of war. We recall his heavy-minded sarcasm as he heaped scorn on any suggestion that war might be possible or that if it came foot troops would be necessary.

Airlift For A Division

By Marquis Childs

Expansion Plan

AS THE old saw goes, for want of a nail the horse lost a shoe, the messenger failed to get through with word to bring up the reserves and the battle was lost. This time the messenger's horse was missing and all the mounts that might have brought up a reserve force in time.

That is to say, there was no air lift ready to take trained units to Japan from where they could have been quickly ferried to Korea. The Marines who left San Diego more than two weeks ago are still on the water as this is written.

While it may be too late—or too early—to waste time assessing blame in view of the urgent tasks ahead, what this tragic lack has cost should not be lost sight of. Fortunately in the over-all plan submitted to Congress for building up the Air Force to meet basic security requirements, an important section is devoted to creating an airlift capable of taking the first step to meet an emergency anywhere.

The plan presented to Senate and House committees calls for procurement by the Air Force of a minimum of 1750 transport planes. These will not necessarily be the C-54 plane which was the standard work horse of the Air Force in World War II. The C-54 is, of course, the DC-4 of the commercial airlines. In the presentation to Congress, the 1750 planes were put down as "C-54 equivalents."

The goal is to have in readiness an airlift sufficient to carry a division of troops anywhere in the world. That could not be done with the fleet of 1750 planes.

But, according to the plan, they would be supplemented by planes and crews drawn from the commercial airlines, from the Military Air Transport Service and from the regular Air Force and the reserve. With the airlift thus supplemented, a highly trained division could be picked up on short notice and taken to almost any point on the globe in a matter of a few days.

THIS is the sort of thing that a lot of high-powered Buck Rogers commentary has led most Americans to think we actually had. As Korea has now shown, it was still almost entirely in the dream stage.

What has been little realized in the midst of the Korean crisis is that a new and effective civilian team is directing the planning of the Air Force. Secretary of the Air Force Thomas K. Finletter had been in office only eight weeks when the Korean war began. Not long after he took over, Finletter persuaded John A. McCone of San Francisco to be Undersecretary.

In 1947 Finletter was chairman and McCone a member of the President's Air Policy Commission. With the three other members, they worked long and hard preparing an impressive report entitled Survival in the Air Age. That report called for preparedness in the air, including in effect a 70-group Air Force. It did not mince words in stating:

"The Air Force as presently composed is inadequate. It is inadequate not only at the present time when we are relatively free of the dangers of sustained attack on our homeland, but it is hopelessly wanting in respect of the future Phase II period when a serious danger of atomic attack will exist."

THE REPORT did not rule out the possibility that other nations might have a few atomic bombs before 1952. But it was assumed that no other country could have an atomic stockpile before 1952, which would mark the beginning of Phase II. In order to step up aircraft production, as the commission well understood, it is essential to take steps years in advance of the time when the planes should be coming off the assembly line.

When W. Stuart Symington, former Secretary of the Air Force, could no longer reconcile his differences with Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, he submitted his resignation and recommended Finletter for the post. Johnson approved of the appointment.

So Finletter and McCone are working together again. McCone, with a long range of experience in both the shipping and aircraft industries, is handling most of the procurement burden. Both men have had a chance to study the deficiencies and inadequacies that multiplied since the report of the President's commission. From the point of view of the responsibility now on their shoulders, it must be a little like looking into the business end of a rifle in the hands of an implacable foe. And they are buckling down to get the job done, praying there will be time enough.

Acheson's Influence

From the time that Dean Acheson has been in a position of influence in the State Department this country has made one false step after another and everyone of them in the direction of weakening and discrediting the United States and of playing directly into the hands of Russia.

It is unthinkable that a man whose judgment has been found to be 100 percent wrong, whose decisions have brought us unprepared to the very brink of another world war, should be allowed to guide the destinies of the country.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Mr. Baruch And Military Planning

MR. BARUCH has had the better of the argument with the Administration. The President's advisers have been reading the statistics. But Mr. Baruch has been reading the public mind.

Lippmann

It is almost certainly true that the inflationary effect of the present military program could, as the Council of Economic Advisers says, be checked without general controls over prices and wages by "private restraint . . . much higher taxes, vigorous restraint upon credit, and a strong allocations program." The present program sounds like a lot of money but in relation to total productivity it is not a very big war effort. If, therefore, we were all statisticians and rational, we should all be exercising "private restraint."

But in fact Mr. Baruch has outguessed the President's advisers both because he knows our unstatistical and irrational but exceedingly human behavior in bull markets and bear markets. The American people are not exercising that private restraint which the President's program calls for. They are speculating in the belief that the President has asked only for the first installment of a total war mobilization and that the time in which goods are not rationed and prices are not fixed will be short. Mr. Baruch's knowledge of speculation has enabled him to keep up with and even ahead of what the people are doing. His argument, moreover, reinforces the popular speculation to anticipate the shortage of goods. For the people believe, and they have Mr. Baruch's word for it besides, that the general controls are not far off and that the free market will not last much longer. So Mr. Truman will probably not be able to deal with that speculation fast enough by the slow devices of taxes that cannot be collected for some months and by the credit restrictions which take effect rather slowly.

Since it will also take time to set up the complicated machinery of rationing and of price and wages controls, Mr. Truman ought not to delay the enactment of the necessary laws.

THUS we are bound to act as if we are moving into a full war economy. Unlike 1940, we begin with something near full employment. There is little slack. The regimentation to convert industry and to redirect labor and to curtail consumption and to plan investment and to regulate exports and imports will have to be imposed more severely and at an earlier stage of the mobilization.

But having recognized that and accepted it, it is essential to realize that our military problem in 1950 is very different from what it was in 1941. On Pearl Harbor day we became members of a grand alliance which greatly outnumbered its enemies. On Korea day we improvised an an alliance which, in respect to military manpower able and willing to fight, is greatly inferior to its adversaries. In the World War there seemed to be no visible limit to the weapons which the alliance could use, provided we could build the ships to transport them.

But today, though we and our allies are far from having the arms we need and could use, once the American economy begins to roll into mass production, we are almost certain to find that we have an overproduction of weapons and an underproduction of combat troops.

IT MAY seem a strange thing to be thinking of at a time when our troops in Korea are so tragically underequipped. But it is the duty of civilians who are away behind the front to look ahead and to plan correctly the programs which will produce their results one, two, and three years hence. In this perspective it is, I believe, essential to the right use of our resources and the right formation of policy to remember the basic fact—that the American capacity to produce arms for land warfare is surely far greater than the capacity of our dependable allies to recruit men to carry the arms. There are figures, which I believe are correct, showing that in the Second World War we overproduced weapons for land warfare: we produced about 86,000 tanks, of which our Army may have used 20,000 and our allies, through lend-lease, another 12,000.

Now the great masses of Russia and of China are not with us but against us. Though our friends, and the friends of what we stand for, are still a majority of mankind, our military alliance must draw its forces from North America and from the peninsula which is western Europe, and from some, not many, outlying countries which can be counted upon in a pinch.

WE CANNOT, therefore, prepare for the same kind of war as in 1941. Then we could hope to win by achieving a crushing superiority in materials and in men over the numerically inferior and economically weaker Axis powers. We crushed them by the overwhelming mass of Russian, British and American manpower and industrial power. But no mass superiority can be achieved against the Communist orbit today. In fact, in mass it is far superior and will retain that superiority until there is a schism within the orbit, unless in fact Communist China takes a separate and independent course from the Soviet Union.

For the time being the Administration is compelled for the sake of national unity to take a line of policy which in practice unites the Chinese with the Russians and tends to separate the Indians from us. Thus, denied the use of diplomacy to lighten our burden, the military burden which we must carry is at its maximum. We have to deter the Russians from going to war. This is in itself a military mission of supreme importance and of the utmost responsibility. But we are asked also to contain with our greatly inferior numbers the armed and armored hordes of the Communist revolution in Asia.

THAT could be the grand piano which broke the camel's back.

Dormant Volcano In Alaska Erupts; Casualties Feared

Anchorage, Alaska, July 31 (U.P.). Mount Pavloff, a long dormant volcano on the Alaska peninsula, erupted early today and sent a tremendous cloud of flame and ash 25,000 feet into the air.

The 8900-foot peak was still spouting fire and lava at 6 p. m. (EDT) today. Dust and ashes were settling on the surrounding area.

Fear was expressed here that the eruption might have inflicted casualties in the native village of Pavloff, 30 miles southwest of the peak.

rationing powers on a standby basis.

Privately, close White House advisers admit they would be delighted with such authority, but would certainly not prepare to apply it in a wholesale fashion at once.

The first large-scale voting test on the issue will come Wednesday. At that time, Representative Kunkel (R., Pa.) will seek to substitute his bill, making price and wage freezes immediate and mandatory for the Administration measure. The latter contains no price, wage or rationing authority.

The Democrats, privately conceding there is little chance of passing any bill without some such authority, will presumably counter by an amendment granting the power to the White House, but on a permissive, or standby basis.

All-Day Debate Due

Meantime, the issue will be debated all day Wednesday, in the House, before it goes to vote.

In the Senate, the Banking and Currency Committee held an all-day closed session yesterday on the Administration bill. Today it will consider the question of adding the price, pay and rationing authority.

Pressure in the Senate to make the grant mandatory, however, is less than in the House. If the power is given, therefore, it will doubtless be on a basis that permits the President to invoke it when he chooses.

Meantime, Senator Taft (R., Ohio), usually the undisputed boss of Senate Republicans on domestic economic policy, battled against the tide. In a statement before the Senate Banking Committee, later made public, he fought against even the authority asked by the Administration.

He said the bill would give Mr. Truman "extreme and arbitrary powers over all industry, commerce and agriculture."

The present situation demanded no such broad grant, he argued. Ordinary, orthodox methods of preventing inflation, through credit curbs and pay-as-you-go taxation to cover added military expenditures, would do the job, he contended.

The White House news that "Barkis is willing" to take standby allout mobilization controls was disclosed by Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) after a morning conference of legislative leaders.

Rayburn told reporters Mr. Truman still believes the limited controls he sought were all that were needed. But in the event Congress passed legislation with the added controls, "the President wouldn't veto such a bill," Rayburn said.

Later, Senator Maybank (R., S. C.), chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, said he had also talked with the Chief Executive and understand he was willing to leave to Congress the decision on whether or not to grant standby freeze and rationing power.

Why Isn't It Wanted

The question, puzzling at first glance, arose in many minds yesterday why, in the face of rising prices and floods of letters appealing for an immediate price freeze, the Administration is hostile to it.

Why, if it will accept permissive authority, is it opposed to acting at once to impose wage and price controls and rationing? Since the price situation will surely get no better and may get worse, why should not the controls be applied at once?

Administration economists have a couple of answers. The first is that there is no sense applying a great deal of authority, and a multitude of measures, when a few will do the trick.

They feel the present situation—even if the added defense, foreign military aid, atomic and stockpile spending jumps to 20 billion dollars—is a far different thing from that in 1941.

Situation Is Different

The size of military and quasi-military spending is still much lower than in World War II. The supply situation is much better. No comparable capital expenditures—such as those for new rubber plants, shipyards, ships and machines—are in prospect. The flow of materials from southeast Asia and elsewhere is not cut off.

Next, the United States is not called on to rearm itself and at the same time supply a great majority of all the armament and civilian needs of the European allies of 1941.

Accordingly, it is thought that measures to "blot up" American purchasing power by the same amount as military spending is increased—in other words, a pay-as-you-go program—plus credit curbs, limitations on civilian production, and allocations of materials to military users will be sufficient.

This is not to say there will be no further price rises. Prices undoubtedly will go up some more. But the hope is that the huge availability of American foodstuffs and other consumer goods will soon put an end to the past few weeks' wave of housewives' panic buying.

Inequities Feared

A second, and equally important reason for the Administration's opposition to mandatory price, wage and rationing controls is that their invocation now would cause literally millions of inequalities. And without a huge, well-organized agency to correct them, business, labor and consumers would come roaring to Washington for redress.

It is recalled that a general price freeze was not applied in World War II until March, 1942. By that time, a big OPA office had been established, with a full field organization. A host of basic raw materials had been previously put under price control. An industrial allocation and priority system had been operating for many months.

With that underlying work done, a general freeze at the retail level was possible, but not before.

It is pointed out that without rationing of some articles, price control is impossible. Yet it takes literally months to set up a rationing organization and print and distribute the hundreds of millions of books and stamps.

Administration experts declare that to impose a freeze by a legislative or White House fiat would create unmitigated chaos in a week.

Accordingly, they view the pressure behind the Kunkel bill with a cynical political eye. They point out that Jesse Wolcott (R., Mich.) ranking minority member of the House Banking Committee and the chief supporter of the legislation, is an old hand in his opposition to Administration economic control policy during and immediately after the last war.

They think the bill is perfectly designed to embarrass the Administration before the November elections.

In fact, some experts close to the White House concede the Republicans have put the Administration over a barrel.

If it attempts to invoke extensive consumer-level controls without adequate preparation it will be drowned under a flood of resulting inequities, while the Republicans cry, "Incompetence!"

If it fails to invoke the powers, however, consumer dissatisfaction with price rises is bound to be a political liability. Republicans can be sure to capitalize upon it by saying they gave the requisite authority to the Administration, but it refused to apply it.

expansion of facilities and work projects."

If these entailed a diversion from the manufacture of plutonium to the making of tritium, the H-bomb explosive, the report did not note it.

The report also mentioned, in what appeared to be the first official comment on the subject since the 1945 Smyth report, the matter of radiological warfare—the use of byproduct material from atomic furnaces, the radiations of which can be deadly over longer or shorter periods of exposure.

The report said only, "Studies on the feasibility of radiological substances as a method of warfare were continued." AEC experts giving newsmen a briefing on the report declined to expand the statement.

Safety Record Cited

But a week ago, a non-AEC scientist published an article pointing out the theoretical possibility of disseminating the "poison dust" over cities in such a fashion as to make human life there impossible.

The bulk of the present issue of the AEC's report was devoted to the story of the fantastic problems—and solutions—incident to the radiations in the AEC's plants.

The work that goes on in them is conceded by scientists, the report noted, to be "by long odds the most dangerous manufacturing process in which men have ever engaged."

Yet AEC safety procedures have resulted in a situation where insurance companies can grant policies to atomic workers at no higher rates than for other employment. The safety record has been such that only five persons have been injured by radiation during the life of the AEC.

2 Deaths in Project

Previously, under wartime pressure, when the project was run by the Army, there were only two deaths. These were from accidents that the report says could not now happen under AEC safety regulations.

The radiations from the Hanford plant, which makes plutonium, are so powerful that an unprotected man could not come within a quarter of a mile of the pile—the "furnace" in which the man-made element is created. Yet the shielding is such at Hanford "that workers move about freely right next door to the storm of radiation."

The shieldmg consists of an elaborate walling in by cement and lead bricks. Operators on the outside perform the necessary functions—including complicated repairs—by ingenious metal arms with metallic "hands" and "fingers" at the end. These respond to remote control directions by the operators and are built so that the man with his hands on the metal arms actually has a sense of feel from the metallic fingers many feet away.

Television Used

Skilled operators, says the report, look behind the shields through overhead mirrors, or through radiation-blocking windows of special glass. If they are explaining something to a colleague, or pointing out work to be done, they manipulate the "hands" and "fingers" as indicators as casually and as easily as if they were pointing their fingers.

Some processes are so "hot" or dangerous, however, that they must be conducted at really remote distances—1000 feet or so. What goes on, then, is observed by television, the report notes. The television has been developed to give stereoscopic—three dimensional—images.

Under AEC rules, workers in the plants are permitted a maximum weekly or annual exposure to radiation far below that considered to have any harmful effect. Thus most workers get in one year less radiation than they would obtain through having their chest X-rayed.

Besides measurement devices showing the amount of radiation in each place, and time limits fixed for each worker at his spot, the employes carry little fountain-pen-like measuring tubes and radio-sensitive film. These are checked daily to indicate how much radiation the worker was exposed to.

Geiger Ship Tests 'Worthless'

Inspecting foreign ships in American ports with Geiger counters, to detect radioactivity and thereby discover whether an atomic bomb is being sneaked in, is an utterly worthless protective measure, American atomic scientists have indicated.

Announcements last week disclosed that customs officials on both coasts are now searching incoming ships from Iron Curtain countries to make sure no atomic weapons are being smuggled in. But, it appeared, if they rely simply on radioactivity detection meters, they might just as well ask the pursers.

At a press conference on the Atomic Energy Commission's semi-annual report, released yesterday, AEC experts were asked whether the Geiger counters, and other available radioactivity detection devices, could reveal the presence of a bomb in a ship's hold.

Although they avoided a direct response, they said that the radiations from plutonium and tritium, the explosives in an atomic bomb and a hydrogen bomb, respectively, would be cloaked from detection by a relatively thin shielding—in some cases, even a packing case.

They agreed that the comment some years ago of famed atomist J. Robert Oppenheimer still held good. He said that the only useful instrument he knew of for such purposes was a screw driver—for prying the boards off every crate to be inspected.

4 Marines Given Permanent Rank

President Truman nominated four Marine Corps officers yesterday for permanent appointment to the grade of major general.

The four, who now hold the rank under temporary appointment, are:

William T. Clement, a veteran of Bataan, Corregidor and Okinawa, who now commands the Marine Corps Recruit Depot at San Diego, Calif.

John T. Walker, a veteran of Guam and Marshall Island fighting who now is Marine Corps personnel director.

Merwin H. Silverthorn, who fought in the recapture of Guam and in the southern Palau and Ryukyu islands and now is assistant Commandant of the Marines.

Ray A. Robinson, a veteran of the Guam and Iwo Jima assaults who now is Marine Corps inspector general.

House Group Votes to Review All Nondefense Appropriations

Korean campaign. We must pay as we go. . . ."

A resolution ordering the new look at non-defense spending was approved at a special meeting of the full committee jointly called by Chairman Cannon and Representative John Taber (New York), ranking Republican member.

Earlier, Cannon is understood to have received an informal go-ahead from the White House. The President told Cannon he has already instructed the Budget Bureau to make a similar review of non-defense items in his budget and had no intention of spending non-essential funds if they are appropriated.

An economy block motion to cut non-military appropriations in the already pruned Senate omnibus appropriation bill by a horizontal 10 percent is now pending in the Senate, but has Administration opposition. Instead of a flat cut, the House idea is to trim items unrelated to the war on a basis of need.

Representative Taber, who joined hands with Cannon in the retrenchment move, said he thought the civil functions sections of the omnibus bill, appropriating hundreds of millions for rivers and harbors and other construction projects, would be a good place to start cutting.

Senator Paul Douglas (D., Ill.), last week led a Senate drive to trim the so-called "pork" from this section, but the cut was rejected.

The House committee resolution, offered by Representative Albert Thomas (D., Tex.), instructed each subcommittee to find out "which program or activities may be curtailed in the light of the necessity of making the maximum amount of Federal revenues available for national defense and thereby minimize inevitable increases in taxes and the public debt."

Cannon said the nonmilitary cutbacks will become part of a supplemental bill carrying the 10½ billion dollars Mr. Truman asked for rearmament, four billion in additional arms aid, and 990 million dollars for additional Navy planes.

"Financially and in every other way all must prepare to make sacrifices for the common cause in the present emergency," Cannon said in a statement.

He said no target figure has been set for nondefense savings, but predicted the House cut would go deeper than the projected Senate percentage slash.

RFC Tightens Its Loan Policy

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation yesterday tightened up on business loans to help check inflationary buying and to conserve materials and equipment for defense purposes.

Chairman Harley Hise announced that loans will be denied in cases where they would be used to buy "substantial quantities" of defense supplies for nonessential purposes.

The new policy is being put in effect immediately in accordance with directions issued by President Truman for Government agencies to help lessen the demand upon materials and other resources essential to the defense efforts and of restricting credit for nondefense purposes which tend to encourage inflation."

Managers of RFC's 31 regional offices over the country were instructed to apply the new policy at once.

"The lending activities of the corporation will be confined principally to those cases where the credit sought is needed to assist in the national defense program," Hise said in a statement.

Hise said that "loans to small businesses, especially those engaged in defense production, will be emphasized."

The RFC's five-man board of directors itself passes upon all loans of $100,000 or more direct from RFC and all cases where it joins with private banks on loans exceeding $350,000.

The RFC credit tightening action was its first general one since the Korean fighting began June 25. Its new restrictions will apply to civilian public works loans for State and local projects as well as to business loans.

Only 6 Per Cent of a Total

The amount reported recently in Chapter IX of the "General Appropriation Act, 1951" for new river and harbor work is $132,554,500. Approximately $86,554,500 is for lock and dam and miscellaneous other work. The amount remaining for channel and harbor improvements is only about $46,000,000, or just about 6 per cent of the total amount reported for all Civil Functions, Department of the Army. Other items in the bill are Quartermaster Corps, Signal Corps, Rivers and Harbors Maintenance, Operation and Care of Locks, Dams and Canals, Flood Control, General; Flood Control, Mississippi River and Tributaries; Flood Control, Sacramento River; and Panama Canal. When the final total is approved by Congress, most of the press will label it the Rivers and Harbors or "Pork Barrel" bill Such distortion works against one of the Nation's most useful and vital assets, during either peace or war—its harbors and channels.

When continued development of harbors and channels will strengthen the Nation for peace or war, benefit the people, and aid other systems of transportation through transshipment, why is a reasonable amount for such improvements bitterly opposed from certain quarters year after year?

New York Cotton

New York, July 31 (AP).—Cotton futures closed $1.60 to $2.55 a bale lower today. Most of the selling and business was done during the first half hour of dealings. Thereafter trading quieted considerably and prices milled over narrow ranges.

Early selling was touched off by failure by the Government last Friday to boost mid-July cotton parity price above 31c a pound, which was the original figure set for June 15 last. The trade had been expecting a sharp boost in the 31c price, but instead of advancing the mid-July cotton parity, the Government revised downward by 25 points, the month ago figure.

Traders also were inclined to take some profits after the recent sharp price advances. There was a fair amount of textile mill buying today but this was not as aggressive as it was last week.

One on the Aisle—

Moscow Had Its Civil Servants

By Richard L. Coe

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY is giving us another view of the theater of the past, with the modern trimmings that so please its audiences.

The play is "The Diary of a Scoundrel," by Alexander Ostrovsky (1823-1886), the most important professional playwright of his day. Of the 48 plays credited to him, most have fallen by the wayside, though the Moscow Art Theater did act "Enough Stupidity in Every Wise Man" on one of its American visits.

What makes it apt for Washington is that some of its characters are in the maze of the Imperial Civil Service, others are climbers in the social clouds of the capital and all are still recognizable as types. The approach is satirical, a bit too heavily so for my present tastes, but it does offer a third act of amusing ingenuity.

Rodney Ackland adopted the play for English performances and one wishes that both he and the present director, England's visiting Basil Langton, had been more generous with the blue pencil. The lines are frequently repetitious, the situations similarly redundant and Director Langton has allowed his individual players far too much leeway for the good of the whole.

The story concerns a young man who's trying to get both a profitable government job and a rich wife. But in his cold, observant heart he knows exactly how he is using the friends he fawns upon and he keeps a diary noting all their stupidities.

When the diary is discovered, he doesn't turn tail, but confounds everyone by pointing out that he has only told what they know to be the truth. That's the third act and it's a good one.

It was 11:20 by the time the curtain came down opening night, fully an extra half-hour and I should think, even more, of futile dialogue that should be ruthlessly cut. Ackland's version isn't sacred, nor, for that matter is Ostrovsky's.

The Russian author's approach, however, is peculiarly observant; he evidently knew his people, the ambitious middle class, well and it is a disservice not to prune him. Even in his time, I read, his works were considered uneven and careless.

The Catholic University production makes use of constructivist settings, but traditional costumes and makeup. Somehow the two didn't seem to fit together; I should imagine that some other form of stylization could be evolved for the conflictingly stylized settings, which, on their own, have an amusing air.

The players are allowed far too much individual freedom, with the result that each holds the attention, whets his tongue over a line far too long. And while he does play the role effectively, John T. Dugan, as a wise young brains truster, is permitted to steal far too many scenes which rightfully belong to others. This sense of unbalance occurs in several other roles, as well, and it is the director's job to get all into focus which task, I assume, has probably been done by now.

On Those Accents!

Bill Callahan is the diarist, an actor who seems to me to be improving, though he has an awkwardness about him that must be overcome. His many appearances at C. U. have included many costume roles and his lack of ease in them is a quality I've often observed.

Another aspect of the production strikes me as disturbing: this being an English adaptation, there are too many attempts to convince you that you are listening to English actors, or, in certain cases, Irish. But, inevitably, such a task is too much, the flat A's and our own tone dominating the voices. I should think it would be far wiser not to even attempt what our most professional players always flounder over.

Among those in the other leading roles are John Miller, Patricia Kielty, Patrick Gilvary, Mary Gavin, Ann York, T. Kathleen Tabor, James Elward, Yacopo Tecchio and Robert Kirby.

This example of the "Balzac of the Muscovite Merchants" will continue in the university's campus theater through Sunday evening.

ANOTHER CLASSIC will be with us this week, Ibsen's "Lady from the Sea," in which Luise Rainer opens tonight at Olney . . . Sam Wanamaker is directing the drama which will be the second in his season of summer revivals at New York's Futon Theater, opening next Monday night . . . The Wanamaker venture with Terese Hayden, in association with Harriett Ames, is an interesting try. . . . Their first and current production is Becque's "Parisienne," with Faye Emerson and they are bringing Blanche Yurka back to Gotham in a third classic, Strindberg's "Crimes and Crimes." . . . With Miss Rainer will be Theodore Newton, Herbert Berghof, Steven Hill, Joan Chandler and Anne Jackson, a promising company.

THIS COLUMN is your reporter's finale for three weeks . . . Covering the theaters for you will be a familiar figure, Sonia Stein, of the radio, TV and features departments and you've had her reviews of things theatrical in the past . . . The busy Orval Hopkins will lend a hand when he can break away from his multitudinous duties . . . I'm especially sorry to miss Sam Wanamaker's Ibsen tonight, the opening of Pau Green's long-awaited "Faith of Our Fathers" and the arrival, on the 16th, of Ed Mangum's Arena Theater. . . . Still, Cape Cod and Long Island have a terrific lure . . . Take it away, Miss Stein.

Obscure Williams One-Acters Click at Cross Roads Barn

By Sonia Stein

The Cross Roads Barn Theater has done a fine thing in assuming a playwright need be neither dead nor George Bernard Shaw to warrant having some of his more obscure works studied just for the historical fun.

Tennessee Williams, three of whose one-act plays the Cross Roads is performing for a second week, burst upon the average playgoer so brilliantly with his "Glass Menagerie" and "Streetcar Named Desire," that most of us are scarcely conscious that the 36-year-old author has written other plays besides the big pair which won him a Pulitzer Prize, two New York Drama Critics Circle Awards, a Donaldson Award and a Sidney Howard Memorial Award.

However, in their choice of the three plays, the group may have leaned a shade too far toward a study of Williams' growth as a playwright, at the expense of the audience's pleasure, since the program includes "The Case of the Crushed Petunias" which Williams now admits was immature and which he much prefers be left unperformed.

Written in 1941 and dedicated hopefully but fruitlessly "to the charm of Helen Hayes," this "lyrical fantasy" would need all the charm of Miss Hayes and a sterling leading man as well, to be palatable. Unfortunately, the Cross Roads is guilty of a triumph of miscasting in this instance.

A Whining Girl

Where should stand a potentially vibrant young lady, circumscribed by the clothes and conventions of Primanproper, Mass., a suburb of Boston where the young lady lives, we have a whining girl who doesn't seem to show any potential.

And where should stand a poetic young man whose voice soars and sings persuasively as he tries to sell Life (not the magazine) to the proper young lady, we have a dreadfully wooden actor, the very image of a muscular high school football captain trying to grope his way through the graduation play.

But except for that, Cross Roads is doing a magnificent job. The first play, a very short one called "The Long Stay Cut Short, or, The Unsatisfactory Supper," is a nice slice of life in which there is no black-hearted vilian but much pain nonetheless, when a very old lady outstays her welcome at the home of her nephew.

This is reminiscent of "The Class Menagerie," which is followed by years, since it deals with the infinitely sad circumstances of a woman whose "mothering" is rejected. The play is acted so exceptionally well by Edith Aymar and George Grizzard that professional players might well look to them for guidance.

Grizzard is also the leading character in the third play, "Ten Blocks on the Camino Real," a long production, heavy with symbolism, which Williams wrote in 1948. Here he is surrounded by a number of lesser characters, most of whom are handicapped by accents of a Spanish or French flavor, and also the estimable Mrs. Aymar who speaks briefly as a kind of one-man chorus off to the side.

Fine Physical Style

Grizzard, every inch an actor, even before he opens his mouth, shows fine physical style as the former middleweight champion of California who had to give up fighting because he has "a heart as big as a baby's head." The slouched, tobacco-chewing Mississippi farmer of the first play, is suddenly a young, square-shouldered man who walks on the balls of his feet. Since Williams' merit seems adequately appreciated, Grizzard's work seems a more exciting matter to notice in this production.

For the play itself, it might be said it is good of its kind—and it's kind is poetic, symbolic, enigmatic. It seems to deal with a none too bright young fighter, wearing his golden gloves for luck, who learns to accept death after spending some strange moments on the Camino Real, a street in "The Heart of the World, Now and Forever." In spite of the eerie overtones, this play has earthy moments. A scene between Grizzard Zoole who plays a gypsy's daughter is, except for the exasperating fact of its symbolism, a very nice item. The gypsy girl's attempts to make conventional conversation before Grizzard removes her veil, and her warm coquetry could stand quite alone without a double meaning.

Gen. Taylor Urges West Berlin as New Bonn State

Berlin, July 31 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor today urged that West Berlin be incorporated in the Bonn Government as a 12th state to prevent any putsch by the "mean fellow across the street."

The American commandant in Berlin referred to the East Berlin Communists.

Expressing his opinion that it is hopeless to seek a Russian agreement for the unification of Berlin, Taylor told allied and East and West German correspondents:

"There is no indication from the Soviet side of any desire to unify Berlin by democratic processes."

Scare Buying Slackens, Store Officials Report

New York, July 31 (AP).—The surge of buying touched off by the Korean war is diminishing, department store executives said today, although total sales in New York City advanced last week.

The New York Federal Reserve Bank sai ddepartment store sales for the week ended July 29 were 39 percent higher than a year ago in New York City. The previous week sales were 29 percent higher than the year before.

Stevenson Pays Tribute To Bach

By Paul Hume

Robert Stevenson came nearest to observing the 200th anniversary of Johann Sebastian Bach of anyone playing a recital in Washington.

Nearest, at least, in point of devoting an entire program to the music of the genius of Leipzig. Howard Mitchell and the National Symphony prefaced their final concert on Friday at the Watergate with the famous Air from the third orchestral suite. And their tribute occurred at about the hour Bach is said to have died.

But Stevenson, playing last night before a filled Phillips Gallery, devoted an entire recital to keyboard works of Bach. For such artistic purpose, and for the excellences of his playing, he is to be heartily thanked.

It is true that July 28 is usually a very warm night in Washington, and not just the time many people who like Bach's music would want to hear it. At the same time, we are glad someone felt that the 200th anniversary of so great a man's passing was an occasion not to be overlooked, even if the tribute came on the thirty-first of the month.

Stevenson has a fluent technique, and no tendency to pound, even in the most trying moments. That is fortunate, especially when one is playing the greatest organ works in piano reductions. No one, not even Franz Liszt, can make the G Minor Fantasy and Fugue sound proper on anything but the organ.

As for music intended for harpsichord, it, too(suffers invariably when transferred to the less colorful piano; less colorful in precisely the way the harpsichord has color. Not only in matters of registration, but in inner voices, accentuations, and in the total accumulation of sounds, the harpsichord is the instrument Bach knew when he wrote his music. And it does not take kindly to the piano.

Locker Room Low Down

Athletes in Know Are Sweet on ALRO

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

MIRACLE OF modern science dept.: A New York disinfectant company has produced a deodorant body powder guaranteed to rid athletes of that "locker room odor." It's called ALRO—antilocker room odor . . . Coaches Harvey Harman, of Rutgers, Bill Glassford, of Nebraska, and Jack Coombs, of Duke, were among the first to discover its value in the locker room and "on the aroma and morale of the students," the producers added. . . . Now if somebody will just come up with a soap to rid us of the smell of the soap that rids us of B. O. we'll be all set . . . Russia's failure to play with the other members of the United Nations has resulted in Soviet being dropped from the mailing list of The Jockey Club, publishers of the American Stud Book . . . Augie Lio, former Georgetown guard, is now a sport writer for the Passaic, N. J., News. . . . The only person Coach Bob Neyland, of Tennessee, fears he may lose from his football squad to the armed services is Neyland himself. He's a West Pointer and a retired brigadier-general . . . And down at Athens, Ga., Coach Wally Butts has military problems, too. His publicity man, Dan Magill, is in the Marine Reserve and expects a call before Georgia's opener with Maryland, September 23. . . . Coach Red Strader of the New York football Yankees, is elated over the savvy of Quarterback Bob Ratterman, whom the Yanks got from the defunct all-American Conference Buffalo Bills. "He knows our plays better than many of the players who've been with us three year," Strader said. . . .

Joe Kuhel

JOE KUHEL, whose Kansas City Blues are in eighth place in the American Association, may be replaced as manager by Tommy Henrich next year, The Sporting News says. Nice guy that he is, Kuhel has been anything but a success as a manager. His Hot Springs, Ark., team finished fifth in a six-club league in 1947, his 1948 Nats were seventh and the 1949 team, eighth. . . . Chairman Heine Miller of the District Commissioners suggests that the plastic wedding cake Willie Pep and his bride received here recently "was the only thing of value in the history of professional boxing that a fight manager hasn't been able to cut." . . . Only nine of 35 players who helped the Chicago Bears win the championship in 1946 are still with the club, but Coach Bob McMillin, of the Detroit Lions has had an even bigger house-cleaning. Only three who were on the team when McMillin took over in 1947 are still with the Lions. . . . Atlantic City racetrack officials are hopeful of having Noor, three-time conqueror of Citation, at Atlantic City for their $25,000 Labor Day Handicap. . . . If you're one of those who's wondering who quarterbacked the Redskins before Baugh, the answer is Riley Smith, the old Alabama star . . . Jack Ricks, Wildwood, N. J., lifeguard who's entered in the 10-mile Jersey Cape Ocean Swim August 20,, suggests the following training tip to all would-be contestants: Start with a three mile swim for a week, then increase it each week until you have reached ten miles or so. . . . Detroit Lions Coach Bo McMillin has laid down the law to Thurman McGraw, rookie tackle candidate. McGraw has been told he can't wrestle a horse, like he did on a student dare during his collegiate days at Colorado A. & M. . . .

Cubs Score 4 in 7th, Win From Dodgers, 8-5

Brooklyn, July 31 (AP).—Scoring four runs in the seventh inning on three hits, three walks and a wild pitch, the Chicago Cubs came from behind to defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 8-5, tonight.

Roy Smalley batted in four runs for Chicago and Dutch Hiller gained his third triumph over the Brooks.

Chris Van Cuyk, who replaced Starter Dan Bankhead in the sixth, was charged with the loss. However, the Cubs scored their winning runs with Rex Barney on the mound.

Barney wild pitched the winning run across after relieving Van Cuyk in the seventh. Two of the three bases on balls he subsequently issued were chased across by Smalley's single off Billy Loes.

After three errors in the first inning gave the Cubs a run, the Dodgers leaped on Hiller for four hits and five runs in the fifth.

Duke Snider's 20th home run with two on highlighted this attack.

The defeat dropped the fourth place Dodgers four and a half games behind the idle pace-setting Philadelphia Phils.

YOU'RE OUT, JOE—Joe Rudder, hitting star of the Randall Motors with four for four, is out at the plate on an attempted double steal in yesterday's game with Sunnybrook in the Post Industrial League on the Ellipse. Umpire Leonard Flank calls the play. Sonny Moreland, Sunnybrook catcher, puts the ball on Rudder and cocks his head the better to hear that His Umpship calls the play right. Randall Motors won, 8-5. Spahn Wins 13th on Cooper's Hit in 9th

Boston, July 31 (AP).—Walker Cooper singled off Tommy Glaviano's glove in the last of the ninth to drive in Earl Torgeson with the winning run tonight as Boston's Braves whipped the St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 and replaced the Redbirds in second place in the feverish National League pennant fight.

Torgeson, who singled to keep the winning rally alive, now has run his hitting streak through 22 games.

Sam Jethroe opened the ninth with a walk and fled to third as Torgeson, hitless in previous trips, slapped a single to right.

The Cards' board of strategy then ordered an intentional walk to Bob Elliott, whose sixteenth homer in the seventh had given the Braves a brief 3-2 lead.

It appeared the unusual tactic might bear fruit as Slats Marion scooped up Sid Gordon's grounder and pegged home to force Jethroe.

Cooper Comes Through

Cooper, himself a former Cardinal, then bounced the first pitch toward third and the game, delayed 48 minutes by rain, was over.

The victory was Warren Spahn's third against two losses over the old pros from Missouri and his thirteenth of the season.

It moved the Tribe six percentage points ahead of the Cards and three games behind the front running Whiz Kids from Philadelphia.

In winning, Spahn gave up six hits, four walks and fanned four which made his league leading strikeout total 132.

One of the Cardinals blows was Tommy Glaviano's fifth homer of the season as leadoff batter in the eighth which pulled the Birds into a 3-3 tie.

Coss Leading As Rain Halts Junior Tennis

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 31.—The national junior and boys national junior and boys' tennis championships got off to an uncertain start today, with rain in the morning and late afternoon washing out most of the action.

Ted Rogers, of Chevy Chase, Md., did not play, but his Washington rival, Tim Coss, was leading John Sahratian, of Detroit, when the elements interfered. The match will be completed tomorrow.

Rogers, who resides in Chevy Chase, Md., is seeded No. 10 in

2 Boxers on Team

Redskins Will Have 1-2 Punch

Special to The Washington Post

Los Angeles, July 31.—The 1950 Washington Redskins are the fightingest squad in the team's history.

It definitely has punch—in fact, a double-barreled sock in two very capable appearing gentlemen named "Chuck" Drazenovich and Ralph (Buddy) Shoaf.

Drazenovich, 6-foot 1-inch, 225-pound fullback rookie from Penn State, and Shoaf, a 5-foot 10-inch, 195-pound halfback hopeful from Virginia, are not only excellent football players but two of the best collegiate boxers ever to represent their institutions.

The broad-shouldered Drazenovich, who looks like he's wearing shoulder pads even when he isn't, was the top collegiate heavyweight in the Nation last year, carrying the blue and white of the Nittany Lions to victory in the N.C.A.A. finals.

Shoaf, who lost but one fight in 26 as a collegiate, won the Eastern light heavyweight title in 1948 and only an injury kept him from repeating in 1949. In '48 he was decisioned in the N.C.A.A. finals.

Among them was Jake Mintz, Jersey Joe Walcott's pilot.

Both Shoaf and Drazenovich say that fighting demands better conditioning than football, mostly because in the ring you are all alone and on the gridiron you've got ten other guys wearing the same uniforms.

Boxing, they say, is the tougher of the two sports.

Drazenovich, who was used mostly as a blocker and line backer at Penn State, has shown fine ball totin' ability in recent scrimmages.

Shoaf gained 464 yards for a 4.7 average while scoring six TD's for the Cavaliers last season. He's also an ace defensive back.

Maybe these boys provide an answer to the question fight fans have been asking for years:

"Where are all the good heavyweights?"

They just might be playing professional football.

Hudson Tries To Cool Off Wynn, Indians

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Cleveland, July 31.—The slugging Nats took a breather today before opening a two-game series tomorrow night against the hottest team in the majors, the Cleveland Indians.

Only two games behind front-running Detroit, the third place Indians have played at a .700 clip for six weeks, and haven't lost a series since June 13.

They apparently aren't going to take any chances with the fifth place Washington club. Tomorrow, they pitch Early Wynn (10-5), and Wednesday night, they'll send the best pitcher in baseball, Bob Lemon (16-4) to the mound.

Washington's big winner, Sid Hudson (10-7) will open the series against Wynn, and Chico Marrero (5-6), a 3-2 conqueror of the Indians 10 days ago, will face Lemon.

The Nats have a chance to stop the Indians if today's off-day does not dull their batting eyes.

After yesterday's 9-5 and 13-8 victories over the pesky Browns, the Nats raised their road record to four wins against three setbacks and could legitimately boost three .300 hitters, and stretch

Draft Boards Call Two In Majors

By The Associated Press

Two major league baseball players received draft calls yesterday.

Firstbaseman Preston Ward, of the Chicago Cubs and second string catcher Sam Calderone, of the New York Giants were ordered by their boards to report for physicals. Firstbaseman Tookie Gilbert, also of the Giants, received a call but was given a 3-A classification because he is married.

Calderine, is 23 and reports tomorrow morning. Ward also 23, was classed 4-F in World War II. He was given permission to wait until his team returns to Chicago to take his tests.

Woodling Triple King

Chicago, July 31 (AP).—Gene Woodling, New York Yankee outfielder, is in a triple-hitting rut.

He hit two three-baggers in the first game of a doubleheader against the Chicago White Sox yesterday to make it five triples during his last eight hits. The triples were Woodling's eighth and ninth of the season.

Kiner Does the Circuit

Pittsburgh, July 31 (AP).—Ralph Kiner, big slugger of the Pittsburgh Pirates, has hit a home run in each National League park this season. He has belted 18 in Forbes Field, home of the Pirates.

On the road, Kiner hit three in Brooklyn, two in Cincinnati and one each in Chicago, St. Louis, New York, Boston and Philadelphia. He has a total of 28.

Frisch Ousted 6 Times

Brooklyn, July 31 (AP).—Frankie Frisch, manager of the Chicago Cubs, holds one mark in the National League this season. But Oncle Franz is far from proud of it. Frisch has been ejected from the ball parks six times this season—the most of any manager in the loop.

Tribe Officials Apologize

Indians' 'Phony' Gifts Burns Up Steve O'Neill

Cleveland, July 31 (AP).—Embarrassed executives of the Cleveland Indians humbly apologized today for the public "humiliation" of Boston Red Sox Manager Steve O'Neill.

But they refused to name the Cleveland front office man who got Stout Steve, a normally placid man, so hopping mad that the "spy glass affair" was taken to Will Harridge, president of the American League.

What happened was this:

On Friday night, in a Cleveland-Boston ball game, O'Neill accused the Indians of employing a man at the scoreboard to steal signals through a spyglass.

Then, before the game Saturday, a package was handed O'Neill in a public ceremony before 47,000 fans. The presentation was made by two men described as citizens of Erie, Pa., and was supposedly a gift from some Erie admirers. Steve, who coached at Cleveland last year, made a solemn acceptance speech and sent the package to the clubhouse.

What a Surprise

When he opened it, he found two telephone books, a toy pair of binoculars and a note suggesting they be left in Cleveland for further use.

With cold fury in his eyes, Steve dashed over to the Cleveland club house and charged inside demanding to know who did it. Everybody looked innocent.

"Day or night," exploded O'Niell, "winter or summer, I'll catch up with the man who did that to me. It was the most disgraceful thing I've ever known to happen in a big league ball park."

Boston's general manager, Joe Cronin, took the affair so seriously he filed a complaint with Harridge. Harridge asked the Indians for an explanation of "this uncalled-for humiliation."

Plan Talks With Harridge

"I talked today with Harridge," said Ellis Ryan, Cleveland's president, "and he feels that I have taken the proper stand in withholding the guilty person's name. Harridge said that to name the person would seriously hurt the Indians' chances of winning the pennant because it would subject our team to jeering in every city in the American League.

"This is a serious thing. Cleveland is O'Neill's home town. I have apologized to Steve and Tom Yawkey, president of the Red Sox. The man will be severely reprimanded.

"As far as I'm concerned the incident is closed. After all, as regrettable as it was, it is not exactly as important as the war in Korea. Why keep the rhubarb going?"

In Detroit Tonight

Tigers, Yanks Clash for Lead

Detroit, July 31 (AP).—The chips will be down tomorrow night when the Detroit Tigers and the New York Yankees clash in the opener of a three-game series.

At stake is undisputed possession of first place in the American League.

The Tigers' margin of first place superiority—which once had reached four and a half games—has been sliced to a tight two percentage points after losing eight of their last 12 contests.

To open the crucial showdown series Yankee Manager Casey Stengel will lead with Southpaw Tommy Byrne. Tiger Manager Red Rolfe has named Art Houtteman.

The Tigers will be facing their old nemesis in Pitcher Byrne. He has defeated Detroit 12 times in 15 games and he is 4-0 over them this season to account for more than half New York victories at Detroit's expense. Byrne's 1950 record is 11-5.

In 13 previous games, the Yankees hold a 7-6 advantage over Detroit in the victory column.

Houtteman has a 12-9 record for the year

Browns President Angry

De Witt Calls Griffith Stadium 'Rundown Excuse for Ballpark'

Cleveland, July 31.—Bill DeWitt, St. Louis Browns president, today took a swing at the press for misinforming the public about him, and in the course of his conversation described Griffith Stadium in Washington as "one of the most rundown excuses for a ballpark in the majors."

The outburst occurred when a reporter, by long distance telephone, asked DeWitt why the Browns had announced 6222 as the paid attendance at yesterday's doubleheader in St. Louis, and had paid Washington club Secretary Edward B. Eynon for less than 4500 customers.

"It's simple enough," explained DeWitt, getting his anger up slowly. "We include passes in our paid attendance figurers announced to the press, but do not count them in paying off the visiting team.

"The passes require a service tax payment at the gate," DeWitt said. "Every team in the majors includes them the same way we do, but do the newspapermen query them?

"No," he answered himself. "They check up on only me."

DeWitt used the name of Vincent X. Flaherty, former Washington, newspaperman, who writes for the Los Angeles Examiner, in taking a crack at the Washington ball park.

"Flaherty called Sportsman Park a ramshackle stadium ready to fall apart," DeWitt said.

"Mr. Flaherty ought to get a look at Griffith Stadium in Washington, and Ebbets Field in Brooklyn and Forbes Field in Pittsburgh," said De Witt indignantly. There you have the oldest and most rundown excuses for major league ball parks.

"Why in Washington, you can't even sit down without digging your knees into the spine of the fellow in front of you."

When Eynon, in Cleveland with the Nats, heard about De Witt's comment, he said:

"I believe Griffith Stadium is the most beautiful in the majors. We have certainly spent more money repairing and maintaining our park than any team in the American League except for Detroit.

"Our park is certainly prettier than St. Louis'. We have more accommodations in our visiting clubhouse than they have in their entire stadium," concluded Eynon.

DeWitt took a last crack at the press for getting him into dutch with Frank Shaughnessy, International League boss, by writing stories that DeWitt considered moving the Browns' franchise to Baltimore.

"As far as I am concerned, the Browns are in St. Louis to stay," said DeWitt, "And I never told any reporters otherwise. They made up their stories."

Puts Firecracker in Window

Tigers' Bonus Pitcher Tosses Strike at Police Cruiser

RICHMOND, IND., July 31 (AP).—Young Bill Hoeft, 17-year-old bonus pitcher with the Richmond Tigers, received a postponement today in his court hearing for throwing firecrackers as well as baseballs.

The hearing was postponed because the team is starting a road trip. No date was set for a later hearing.

Hoeft, signed by the Detroit Tigers several weeks ago and assigned to their Richmond farm club in the Class D Ohio-Indiana League, was arrested Saturday and accused of pitching firecrackers into passing autos.

Also under arrest on the same charge is a 19-year-old Richmond outfielder, Keith Jones. They were nabbed after one of their firecrackers landed in the cruiser of a police lieutenant.

Hoeft, a pitching sensation while in high school at Oshkosh, Wis., chalked up his fourth victory of the year yesterday in a 5-4 decision over Lima. He has lost one game.

The Naked Truth

Basketeer Pulls Strip Tease But Team Still Falls Short

Buenos Aires, July 31 (AP).—Basketball fans still were chuckling here today over last night's game between the United States West Coast All-Stars and the Buenos Aires Basketball Federation team.

The Federation won, 57-56, but during the heat of battle the scorekeeper lost count of the scoring. Rene Herrerias of the All-Stars went out on personal fouls, and then teammate Stan Christie was ejected for arguing with the referee.

With six seconds left to play the All-Stars trailed by a point and had only four players on the floor. Gus Chavales, who had been ill, rushed on the floor in his street clothes, but the referee refused to let him play.

As the All-Stars crowded around, Chavales stripped off his trousers and pulled on basketball shorts while the crowd cheered. But the All-Stars couldn't get the necessary points.

Dobson, Kinder OK; Will Rejoin Bosox Soon

Boston, July 31 (AP).—Red Sox pitchers Joe Dobson and Ellis Kinder, who returned here for medical treatment, will be able to play in a few days, Dr. Ralph McCarthy, club physician, said today.

An X-ray examination showed that Dobson suffered a painful bruise when hit on the side by Larry Doby's line drive yesterday in Cleveland. Dr. Paul Butler said "there is some discoloration on his lower right side, but no fracture. It shouldn't keep him out of the lineup for more than a few days."

Kinder took a whirlpool bath at the Sox' Fenway Park clubhouse to ease the pain of his aggravated rib injury. Kinder was struck by a batted ball in spring training and the injury has bothered occasionally since.

Moscow Had Its Civil Servants

By Richard L. Coe

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY is giving us another view of the theater of the past, with the modern trimmings that so please its audiences.

The play is "The Diary of a Scoundrel," by Alexander Ostrovsky (1823-1886), the most important professional playwright of his day. Of the 48 plays credited to him, most have fallen by the wayside, though the Moscow Art Theater did act "Enough Stupidity in Every Wise Man" on one of its American visits.

What makes it apt for Washington is that some of its characters are in the maze of the Imperial Civil Service, others are climbers in the social clouds of the capital and all are still recognizable as types. The approach is satirical, a bit too heavily so for my present tastes, but it does offer a third act of amusing ingenuity.

Rodney Ackland adopted the play for English performances and one wishes that both he and the present director, England's visiting Basil Langton, had been more generous with the blue pencil. The lines are frequently repetitious, the situations similarly redundant and Director Langton has allowed his individual players far too much leeway for the good of the whole.

The story concerns a young man who's trying to get both a profitable government job and a rich wife. But in his cold, observant heart he knows exactly how he is using the friends he fawns upon and he keeps a diary noting all their stupidities.

When the diary is discovered, he doesn't turn tail, but confounds everyone by pointing out that he has only told what they know to be the truth. That's the third act and it's a good one.

It was 11:20 by the time the curtain came down opening night, fully an extra half-hour and, I should think, even more, of futile dialogue that should be ruthlessly cut. Ackland's version isn't sacred, nor, for that matter is Ostrovsky's.

The Russian author's approach, however, is peculiarly observant; he evidently knew his people, the ambitious middle class, well and it is a disservice not to prune him. Even in his time, I read, his works were considered uneven and careless.

The Catholic University production makes use of constructivist settings, but traditional costumes and makeup. Somehow the two didn't seem to fit together; I should imagine that some other form of stylization could be evolved for the conflictingly stylized settings, which, on their own, have an amusing air.

The players are allowed far too much individual freedom, with the result that each holds the attention, whets his tongue over a line far too long. And while he does play the role effectively, John T. Dugan, as a wise young brains truster, is permitted to steal far too many scenes which rightfully belong to others. This sense of unbalance occurs in several other roles, as well, and it is the director's job to get all into focus which task, I assume, has probably been done by now.

On Those Accents!

Bill Callahan is the diarist, an actor who seems to me to be improving, though he has an awkwardness about him that must be overcome. His many appearances at C. U. have included many costume roles and his lack of ease in them is a quality I've often observed.

Another aspect of the production strikes me as disturbing: this being an English adaptation, there are too many attempts to convince you that you are listening to English actors, or, in certain cases, Irish. But, inevitably, such a task is too much, the flat A's and our own tone dominating the voices. I should think it would be far wiser not to even attempt what our most professional players always flounder over.

Among those in the other leading roles are John Miller, Patricia Kielty, Patrick Gilvary, Mary Gavin, Ann York, T. Kathleen Tabor, James Elward, Yacopo Tecchio and Robert Kirby.

This example of the "Balzac of the Muscovite Merchants" will continue in the university's campus theater through Sunday evening.

ANOTHER CLASSIC will be with us this week, Ibsen's "Lady from the Sea," in which Luise Rainer opens tonight at Olney . . . Sam Wanamaker is directing the drama which will be the second in his season of summer revivals at New York's Futon Theater, opening next Monday night . . . The Wanamaker venture with Terese Hayden, in association with Harriett Ames, is an interesting try. . . . Their first and current production is Becque's "Parisienne," with Faye Emerson and they are bringing Blanche Yurka back to Gotham in a third classic, Strindberg's "Crimes and Crimes." . . . With Miss Rainer will be Theodore Newton, Herbert Berghof, Steven Hill, Joan Chandler and Anne Jackson, a promising company.

THIS COLUMN is your reporter's finale for three weeks . . . Covering the theaters for you will be a familiar figure, Sonia Stein, of the radio, TV and features departments and you've had her reviews of things theatrical in the past . . . The busy Orval Hopkins will lend a hand when he can break away from his multitudinous duties . . . I'm especially sorry to miss Sam Wanamaker's Ibsen tonight, the opening of Pau Green's long-awaited "Faith of Our Fathers" and the arrival, on the 16th, of Ed Mangum's Arena Theater. . . . Still, Cape Cod and Long Island have a terrific lure . . . Take it away, Miss Stein.

Obscure Williams One-Acters Click at Cross Roads Barn

By Sonia Stein

The Cross Roads Barn Theater has done a fine thing in assuming a playwright need be neither dead nor George Bernard Shaw to warrant having some of his more obscure works studied just for the historical fun.

Tennessee Williams, three of whose one-act plays the Cross Roads is performing for a second week, burst upon the average playgoer so brilliantly with his "Glass Menagerie" and "Streetcar Named Desire," that most of us are scarcely conscious that the 36-year-old author has written other plays besides the big pair which won him a Pulitzer Prize, two New York Drama Critics Circle Awards, a Donaldson Award and a Sidney Howard Memorial Award.

However, in their choice of the three plays, the group may have leaned a shade too far toward a study of Williams' growth as a playwright, at the expense of the audience's pleasure, since the program includes "The Case of the Crushed Petunias" which Williams now admits was immature and which he much prefers be left unperformed.

Written in 1941 and dedicated hopefully but fruitlessly "to the charm of Helen Hayes," this "lyrical fantasy" would need all the charm of Miss Hayes and a sterling leading man as well, to be palatable. Unfortunately, the Cross Roads is guilty of a triumph of miscasting in this instance.

A Whining Girl

Where should stand a potentially vibrant young lady, circumscribed by the clothes and conventions of Primanproper, Mass., a suburb of Boston where the young lady lives, we have a whining girl who doesn't seem to show any potential.

And where should stand a poetic young man whose voice soars and sings persuasively as he tries to sell Life (not the magazine) to the proper young lady, we have a dreadfully wooden actor, the very image of a muscular high school football captain trying to grope his way through the graduation play.

But except for that, Cross Roads is doing a magnificent job. The first play, a very short one called "The Long Stay Cut Short, or, The Unsatisfactory Supper," is a nice slice of life in which there is no black-hearted vilian but much pain nonetheless, when a very old lady outstays her welcome at the home of her nephew.

This is reminiscent of "The Class Menagerie," which it followed by years, since it deals with the infinitely sad circumstances of a woman whose "mothering" is rejected. The play is acted so exceptionally well by Edith Aymar and George Grizzard that professional players might well look to them for guidance.

Grizzard is also the leading character in the third play, "Ten Blocks on the Camino Real," a long production, heavy with symbolism, which Williams wrote in 1948. Here he is surrounded by a number of lesser characters, most of whom are handicapped by accents of a Spanish or French flavor, and also the estimable Mrs. Aymar who speaks briefly as a kind of one-man chorus off to the side.

Fine Physical Style

Grizzard, every inch an actor, even before he opens his mouth, shows fine physical style as the former middleweight champion of California who had to give up fighting because he has "a heart as big as a baby's head." The slouched, tobacco-chewing Mississippi farmer of the first play, is suddenly a young, square-shouldered man who walks on the balls of his feet. Since Williams' merit seems adequately appreciated, Grizzard's work seems a more exciting matter to notice in this production.

For the play itself, it might be said it is good of its kind—and it's kind is poetic, symbolic, enigmatic. It seems to deal with a none too bright young fighter, wearing his golden gloves for luck, who learns to accept death after spending some strange moments on the Camino Real, a street in "The Heart of the World, Now and Forever." In spite of the eerie overtones, this play has earthy moments. A scene between Grizzard Zoole who plays a gypsy's daughter is, except for the exasperating fact of its symbolism, a very nice item. The gypsy girl's attempts to make conventional conversation before Grizzard removes her veil, and her warm coquetry could stand quite alone without a double meaning.

Gen. Taylor Urges West Berlin as New Bonn State

Berlin, July 31 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor today urged that West Berlin be incorporated in the Bonn Government as a 12th state to prevent any putsch by the "mean fellow across the street."

The American commandant in Berlin referred to the East Berlin Communists.

Expressing his opinion that it is hopeless to seek a Russian agreement for the unification of Berlin, Taylor told allied and East and West German correspondents:

"There is no indication from the Soviet side of any desire to unify Berlin by democratic processes."

Scare Buying Slackens, Store Officials Report

New York, July 31 (AP).—The surge of buying touched off by the Korean war is diminishing, department store executives said today, although total sales in New York City advanced last week.

The New York Federal Reserve Bank sai ddepartment store sales for the week ended July 29 were 39 percent higher than a year ago in New York City. The previous week sales were 29 percent higher than the year before.

Trade Agreement Signed

Bohn, Germany, July 31 (U.P.).—Argentina and western Germany signed a 250 million trade agreement today.

Stevenson Pays Tribute To Bach

By Paul Hume

Robert Stevenson came nearest to observing the 200th anniversary of Johann Sebastian Bach of anyone playing a recital in Washington.

Nearest, at least, in point of devoting an entire program to the music of the genius of Leipzig. Howard Mitchell and the National Symphony prefaced their final concert on Friday at the Watergate with the famous Air from the third orchestral suite. And their tribute occurred at about the hour Bach is said to have died.

But Stevenson, playing last night before a filled Phillips Gallery, devoted an entire recital to keyboard works of Bach. For such artistic purpose, and for the excellences of his playing, he is to be heartily thanked.

It is true that July 28 is usually a very warm night in Washington, and not just the time many people who like Bach's music would want to hear it. At the same time, we are glad someone felt that the 200th anniversary of so great a man's passing was an occasion not to be overlooked, even if the tribute came on the thirty-first of the month.

Stevenson has a fluent technique, and no tendency to pound, even in the most trying moments. That is fortunate, especially when one is playing the greatest organ works in piano reductions. No one, not even Franz Liszt, can make the G Minor Fantasy and Fugue sound proper on anything but the organ.

As for music intended for harpsichord, it, too(suffers invariably when transferred to the less colorful piano; less colorful in precisely the way the harpsichord has color. Not only in matters of registration, but in inner voices, accentuations, and in the total accumulation of sounds, the harpsichord is the instrument Bach knew when he wrote his music. And it does not take kindly to the piano.

Locker Room Low Down

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

MIRACLE OF modern science dept.: A New York disinfectant company has produced a deodorant body powder guaranteed to rid athletes of that "locker room odor." It's called ALRO—antilocker room odor . . . Coaches Harvey Harman, of Rutgers, Bill Glassford, of Nebraska, and Jack Coombs, of Duke, were among the first to discover its value in the locker room and "on the aroma and morale of the students," the producers added. . . . Now if somebody will just come up with a soap to rid us of the smell of the soap that rids us of B. O. we'll be all set . . . Russia's failure to play with the other members of the United Nations has resulted in Soviet being dropped from the mailing list of The Jockey Club, publishers of the American Stud Book . . . Augie Lio, former Georgetown guard, is now a sport writer for the Passaic, N. J., News. . . . The only person Coach Bob Neyland, of Tennessee, fears he may lose from his football squad to the armed services is Neyland himself. He's a West Pointer and a retired brigadier-general . . . And down at Athens, Ga., Coach Wally Butts has military problems, too. His publicity man, Dan Magill, is in the Marine Reserve and expects a call before Georgia's opener with Maryland, September 23. . . . Coach Red Strader of the New York football Yankees, is elated over the savvy of Quarterback Bob Ratterman, whom the Yanks got from the defunct all-American Conference Buffalo Bills. "He knows our plays better than many of the players who've been with us three year," Strader said. . . .

Joe Kuhel

JOE KUHEL, whose Kansas City Blues are in eighth place in the American Association, may be replaced as manager by Tommy Henrich next year, The Sporting News says. Nice guy that he is, Kuhel has been anything but a success as a manager. His Hot Springs, Ark., team finished fifth in a six-club league in 1947, his 1948 Nats were seventh and the 1949 team, eighth. . . . Chairman Heine Miller of the District Commissioners suggests that the plastic wedding cake Willie Pep and his bride received here recently "was the only thing of value in the history of professional boxing that a fight manager hasn't been able to cut." . . . Only nine of 35 players who helped the Chicago Bears win the championship in 1946 are still with the club, but Coach Bob McMillin, of the Detroit Lions has had an even bigger house-cleaning. Only three who were on the team when McMillin took over in 1947 are still with the Lions. . . . Atlantic City racetrack officials are hopeful of having Noor, three-time conqueror of Citation, at Atlantic City for their $25,000 Labor Day Handicap. . . . If you're one of those who's wondering who quarterbacked the Redskins before Baugh, the answer is Riley Smith, the old Alabama star . . . Jack Ricks, Wildwood, N. J., lifeguard who's entered in the 10-mile Jersey Cape Ocean Swim August 20, suggests the following training tip to all would-be contestants: Start with a three mile swim for a week, then increase it each week until you have reached ten miles or so. . . . Detroit Lions Coach Bo McMillin has laid down the law to Thurman McGraw, rookie tackle candidate. Cubs Score 4 in 7th, Win From Dodgers, 8-5

Brooklyn, July 31 (AP).—Scoring four runs in the seventh inning on three hits, three walks and a wild pitch, the Chicago Cubs came from behind to defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 8-5, tonight.

Roy Smalley batted in four runs for Chicago and Dutch Hiller gained his third triumph over the Brooks.

Chris Van Cuyk, who replaced Starter Dan Bankhead in the sixth, was charged with the loss. However, the Cubs scored their winning runs with Rex Barney on the mound.

Barney wild pitched the winning run across after relieving Van Cuyk in the seventh. Two of the three bases on balls he subsequently issued were chased across by Smalley's single off Billy Loes.

After three errors in the first inning gave the Cubs a run, the Dodgers leaped on Hiller for four hits and five runs in the fifth.

Duke Snider's 20th home run with two on highlighted this attack.

The defeat dropped the fourth place Dodgers four and a half games behind the idle pace-setting Philadelphia Phils.

Spahn Wins 13th on Cooper's Hit in 9th

Boston, July 31 (AP).—Walker Cooper singled off Tommy Glaviano's glove in the last of the ninth to drive in Earl Torgeson with the winning run tonight as Boston's Braves whipped the St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 and replaced the Redbirds in second place in the feverish National League pennant fight.

Torgeson, who singled to keep the winning rally alive, now has run his hitting streak through 22 games.

Sam Jethroe opened the ninth with a walk and fled to third as Torgeson, hitless in previous trips, slapped a single to right.

The 'Cards' board of strategy then ordered an intentional walk to Bob Elliott, whose sixteenth homer in the seventh had given the Braves a brief 3-2 lead.

It appeared the unusual tactic might bear fruit as Slats Marion scooped up Sid Gordon's grounder and pegged home to force Jethroe.

Cooper Comes Through

Cooper, himself a former Cardinal, then bounced the first pitch toward third and the game, delayed 48 minutes by rain, was over.

The victory was Warren Spahn's third against two losses over the old pros from Missouri and his thirteenth of the season.

It moved the Tribe six percentage points ahead of the Cards and three games behind the front running Whiz Kids from Philadelphia.

In winning, Spahn gave up six hits, four walks and fanned four which made his league leading strikeout total 132.

One of the Cardinals blows was Tommy Glaviano's fifth homer of the season as leadoff batter in the eighth which pulled the Birds into a 3-3 tie.

Ted Rogers, of Chevy Chase, Md., did not play, but his Washington rival, Tim Coss, was leading John Sahratian, of Detroit, when the elements interfered. The match will be completed tomorrow.

Top-seeded Hamilton Richardson, of Baton Rouge, La., the outstanding junior favorite drew a bye.

Redskins Will Have 1-2 Punch

Special to The Washington Post

Los Angeles, July 31.—The 1950 Washington Redskins are the fightingest squad in the team's history.

It definitely has punch—in fact, a double-barreled sock in two very capable appearing gentlemen named "Chuck" Drazenovich and Ralph (Buddy) Shoaf.

Drazenovich, 6-foot 1-inch, 225-pound fullback rookie from Penn State, and Shoaf, a 5-foot 10-inch, 195-pound halfback hopefu' from Virginia, are not only excellent football players but two of the best collegiate boxers ever to represent their institutions.

The broad-shouldered Drazenovich, who looks like he's wearing shoulder pads even when he isn't, was the top collegiate heavyweight in the Nation last year, carrying the blue and white of the Nittany Lions to victory in the N.C.A.A. finals.

Shoaf, who lost but one fight in 26 as a collegiate, won the Eastern light heavyweight title in 1948 and only an injury kept him from repeating in 1949. In '48 he was decisioned in the N.C.A.A. finals.

Among them was Jake Mintz, Jersey Joe Walcott's pilot.

Both Shoaf and Drazenovich say that fighting demands better conditioning than football, mostly because in the ring you are all alone and on the gridiron you've got ten other guys wearing the same uniforms.

Boxing, they say, is the tougher of the two sports.

Drazenovich, who was used mostly as a blocker and line backer at Penn State, has shown fine ball totin' ability in recent scrimmages.

Shoaf gained 464 yards for a 4.7 average while scoring six TD's for the Cavaliers last season. He's also an ace defensive back.

Maybe these boys provide an answer to the question fight fans have been asking for years:

"Where are all the good heavyweights?"

They just might be playing professional football.

Tigers' Bonus Pitcher Tosses Strike at Police Cruiser

RICHMOND, IND., July 31. (AP).—Young Bill Hoeft, 17-year-old bonus pitcher with the Richmond Tigers, received a postponement today in his court hearing for throwing firecrackers as well as baseballs.

The hearing was postponed because the team is starting a road trip. No date was set for a later hearing.

Hoeft, signed by the Detroit Tigers several weeks ago and assigned to their Richmond farm club in the Class D Ohio-Indiana League, was arrested Saturday and accused of pitching firecrackers into passing autos.

Also under arrest on the same charge is a 19-year-old Richmond outfielder, Keith Jones. They were nabbed after one of their firecrackers landed in the cruiser of a police lieutenant.

Hoeft, a pitching sensation while in high school at Oshkosh, Wis., chalked up his fourth victory of the year yesterday in a 5-4 decision over Lima. He has lost one game.

Browns President Angry

De Witt Calls Griffith Stadium 'Rundown Excuse for Ballpark'

Cleveland, July 31.—Bill DeWitt, St. Louis Browns president, today took a swing at the press for misinforming the public about him, and in the course of his conversation described Griffith Stadium in Washington as "one of the most rundown excuses for a ballpark in the majors."

The outburst occurred when a reporter, by long distance telephone, asked DeWitt why the Browns had announced 6222 as the paid attendance at yesterday's doubleheader in St. Louis, and had paid Washington club Secretary Edward B. Eynon for less than 4500 customers.

"It's simple enough," explained DeWitt, getting his anger up slowly. "We include passes in our paid attendance figurers announced to the press, but do not count them in paying off the visiting team.

"The passes require a service tax payment at the gate," DeWitt said. "Every team in the majors includes them the same way we do, but do the newspapermen query them?

"No," he answered himself. "They check up on only me."

DeWitt used the name of Vincent X. Flaherty, former Washington, newspaperman, who writes for the Los Angeles Examiner, in taking a crack at the Washington ball park.

"Flaherty called Sportsman Park a ramshackle stadium ready to fall apart," DeWitt said.

"Mr. Flaherty ought to get a look at Griffith Stadium in Washington, and Ebbets Field in Brooklyn and Forbes Field in Pittsburgh," said De Witt indignantly. There you have the oldest and most rundown excuses for major league ball parks.

"Why in Washington, you can't even sit down without digging your knees into the spine of the fellow in front of you."

When Eynon, in Cleveland with the Nats, heard about De Witt's comment, he said:

"I believe Griffith Stadium is the most beautiful in the majors. We have certainly spent more money repairing and maintaining our park than any team in the American League except for Detroit.

"Our park is certainly prettier than St. Louis'. We have more accommodations in our visiting clubhouse than they have in their entire stadium," concluded Eynon.

DeWitt took a last crack at the press for getting him into dutch with Frank Shaughnessy, International League boss, by writing stories that DeWitt considered moving the Browns' franchise to Baltimore.

"As far as I am concerned, the Browns are in St. Louis to stay," said DeWitt, "And I never told any reporters otherwise. They made up their stories."

Hudson Tries To Cool Off Wynn, Indians

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Cleveland, July 31.—The slugging Nats took a breather today before opening a two-game series tomorrow night against the hottest team in the majors, the Cleveland Indians.

Only two games behind front-running Detroit, the third place Indians have played at a .700 clip for six weeks, and haven't lost a series since June 13.

They apparently aren't going to take any chances with the fifth place Washington club. Tomorrow, they pitch Early Wynn (10-5), and Wednesday night, they'll send the best pitcher in baseball, Bob Lemon (16-4) to the mound.

Washington's big winner, Sid Hudson (10-7) will open the series against Wynn, and Chico Marrero (5-6), a 3-2 conqueror of the Indians 10 days ago, will face Lemon.

The Nats have a chance to stop the Indians if today's off-day does not dull their batting eyes.

After yesterday's 9-5 and 13-8 victories over the pesky Browns, the Nats raised their road record to four wins against three setbacks and could legitimately boost three .300 hitters, and stretch

Draft Boards Call Two In Majors

By The Associated Press

Two major league baseball players received draft calls yesterday.

Firstbaseman Preston Ward, of the Chicago Cubs and second string catcher Sam Calderone, of the New York Giants were ordered by their boards to report for physicals. Firstbaseman Tookie Gilbert of also of the Giants, received a call but was given a 3-A classification because he is married.

Calderine, is 23 and reports tomorrow morning. Ward also 23, was classed 4-F in World War II. He was given permission to wait until his team returns to Chicago to take his tests.

Woodling Triple King

Chicago, July 31 (AP).—Gene Woodling, New York Yankee outfielder, is in a triple-hitting rut.

He hit two three-baggers in the first game of a doubleheader against the Chicago White Sox yesterday to make it five triples during his last eight hits. The triples were Woodling's eighth and ninth of the season.

Kiner Does the Circuit

Pittsburgh, July 31 (AP).—Ralph Kiner, big slugger of the Pittsburgh Pirates, has hit a home run in each National League park this season. He has belted 18 in Forbes Field, home of the Pirates.

On the road, Kiner hit three in Brooklyn, two in Cincinnati and one each in Chicago, St. Louis, New York, Boston and Philadelphia. He has a total of 28.

Frisch Ousted 6 Times

Brooklyn, July 31 (AP).—Frankie Frisch, manager of the Chicago Cubs, holds one mark in the National League this season. But Oncle Franz is far from proud of it. Frisch has been ejected from the ball parks six times this season—the most of any manager in the loop.

Tribe Officials Apologize

Indians' 'Phony' Gifts Burns Up Steve O'Neill

Cleveland, July 31 (AP).—Embarrassed executives of the Cleveland Indians humbly apologized today for the public "humiliation" of Boston Red Sox Manager Steve O'Neill.

But they refused to name the Cleveland front office man who got Stout Steve, a normally placid man, so hopping mad that the "spy glass affair" was taken to Will Harridge, president of the American League.

What happened was this:

On Friday night, in a Cleveland-Boston ball game, O'Neill accused the Indians of employing a man at the scoreboard to steal signals through a spyglass.

Then, before the game Saturday, a package was handed O'Neill in a public ceremony before 47,000 fans. The presentation was made by two men described as citizens of Erie, Pa., and was supposedly a gift from some Erie admirers. Steve, who coached at Cleveland last year, made a solemn acceptance speech and sent the package to the clubhouse.

What a Surprise

When he opened it, he found two telephone books, a toy pair of binoculars and a note suggesting they be left in Cleveland for further use.

With cold fury in his eyes, Steve dashed over to the Cleveland club house and charged inside demanding to know who did it. Everybody looked innocent.

"Day or night," exploded O'Niell, "winter or summer, I'll catch up with the man who did that to me. It was the most disgraceful thing I've ever known to happen in a big league ball park."

Boston's general manager, Joe Cronin, took the affair so seriously he filed a complaint with Harridge. Harridge asked the Indians for an explanation of "this uncalled-for humiliation."

Plan Talks With Harridge

"I talked today with Harridge," said Ellis Ryan, Cleveland's president, "and he feels that I have taken the proper stand in withholding the guilty person's name. Harridge said that to name the person would seriously hurt the Indians' chances of winning the pennant because it would subject our team to jeering in every city in the American League.

"This is a serious thing. Cleveland is O'Neill's home town. I have apologized to Steve and Tom Yawkey, president of the Red Sox. The man will be severely reprimanded.

"As far as I'm concerned the incident is closed. After all, as regrettable as it was, it is not exactly as important as the war in Korea. Why keep the rhubarb going?"

In Detroit Tonight

Tigers, Yanks Clash for Lead

Detroit, July 31 (AP).—The chips will be down tomorrow night when the Detroit Tigers and the New York Yankees clash in the opener of a three-game series.

At stake is undisputed possession of first place in the American League.

The Tigers' margin of first place superiority—which once had reached four and a half games—has been sliced to a tight two percentage points after losing eight of their last 12 contests.

To open the crucial showdown series Yankee Manager Casey Stengel will lead with Southpaw Tommy Byrne. Tiger Manager Red Rolfe has named Art Houtteman.

The Tigers will be facing their old nemesis in Pitcher Byrne. He has defeated Detroit 12 times in 15 games and he is 4-0 over them this season to account for more than half New York victories at Detroit's expense. Byrne's 1950 record is 11-5.

In 13 previous games, the Yankees hold a 7-6 advantage over Detroit in the victory column.

Houtteman has a 12-9 record for the year

Tigers' Bonus Pitcher Tosses Strike at Police Cruiser

RICHMOND, IND., July 31. (AP).—Young Bill Hoeft, 17-year-old bonus pitcher with the Richmond Tigers, received a postponement today in his court hearing for throwing firecrackers as well as baseballs.

The hearing was postponed because the team is starting a road trip. No date was set for a later hearing.

Hoeft, signed by the Detroit Tigers several weeks ago and assigned to their Richmond farm club in the Class D Ohio-Indiana League, was arrested Saturday and accused of pitching firecrackers into passing autos.

Also under arrest on the same charge is a 19-year-old Richmond outfielder, Keith Jones. They were nabbed after one of their firecrackers landed in the cruiser of a police lieutenant.

Hoeft, a pitching sensation while in high school at Oshkosh, Wis., chalked up his fourth victory of the year yesterday in a 5-4 decision over Lima. He has lost one game.

The Naked Truth

Basketeer Pulls Strip Tease But Team Still Falls Short

Buenos Aires, July 31 (AP).—Basketball fans still were chuckling here today over last night's game between the United States West Coast All-Stars and the Buenos Aires Basketball Federation team.

The Federation won, 57-56, but during the heat of battle the scorekeeper lost count of the scoring. Rene Herrerias of the All-Stars went out on personal fouls, and then teammate Stan Christie was ejected for arguing with the referee.

With six seconds left to play the All-Stars trailed by a point and had only four players on the floor. Gus Chavales, who had been ill, rushed on the floor in his street clothes, but the referee refused to let him play.

As the All-Stars crowded around, Chavales stripped off his trousers and pulled on basketball shorts while the crowd cheered. But the All-Stars couldn't get the necessary points.

Dobson, Kinder OK; Will Rejoin Bosox Soon

Boston, July 31 (AP).—Red Sox pitchers Joe Dobson and Ellis Kinder, who returned here for medical treatment, will be able to play in a few days, Dr. Ralph McCarthy, club physician, said today.

An X-ray examination showed that Dobson suffered a painful bruise when hit on the side by Larry Doby's line drive yesterday in Cleveland. Dr. Paul Butler said "there is some discoloration on his lower right side, but no fracture. It shouldn't keep him out of the lineup for more than a few days."

Kinder took a whirlpool bath at the Sox' Fenway Park clubhouse to ease the pain of his aggravated rib injury. Kinder was struck by a batted ball in spring training and the injury has bothered occasionally since.

things a little by claiming five in the charmed circle.

The legitimate .300 boys are Irv Noren, .313; Sam Mele, .305, and Cass Michaels, .303. Then, there's Mickey Vernon, hitting .326 in his weeks as a Nat (he raised his overall average from .198 to .275 since leaving Cleveland), and Mickey Grasso, whose .314 hitting has made him a catching alternate with Al Evans.

Not too far behind the elite is Eddie Yost with .292.

Particularly can the Nats thank their No. 3, 4 and 5 hitters, Noren, Vernon and Mele, for their successes on the road. All have been hitting for distance and with men on the bases.

In the seven Western games, Noren has hit two homers and rapped in 9 runs. Vernon has one homer and 8 RBIs, and Mele has socked a double, two triples and two homers, and batted across 13 runs.

12,000 See Du Pont Colt Take Flash

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 31 (AP).—Mrs. Esther Dupont's Northner Star, fleet son of Mirza II, impressively captured the seventy-sixth running of the Flash Stakes as the eighty-first season of racing at this ancient thoroughbred center got under way before a crowd of 12,020.

It was the colt's first stakes triumph, worth $7875 to his owner, and his third in seven starts.

The English - bred youngster stormed home a short length before Phantom Farm's Nullify, the highweight of the field under 126 pounds, and reeled over the 5½ furlongs in a swift 1:05 1/5. Third in the field of nine of the season's better juveniles was Maine Chance Farm's Win or Lose, which was nosed out by Nullify, and had only a head to spare over Wheatley Stable's Hit Back.

Northern Star, which rounded out a riding double for Eric Guerin, was the fourth successive favorite of the afternoon, paying $8, $4.70 and $3.50. Nullify returned $5.90 and $3.80, while Win or Lose was $3.40 to show. Guerin earlier had scored atop Rose Fern, $6.20, in the fourth.

The opening was marred somewhat by inclement weather, and the attendance was slightly under the turnout of 14,442 which patronized the inaugural last year. The betting was expected to run around $580,000, as against $635,453 in 1949.

Selby Bay Yacht Club Has Outing

By Happy Walker

SELBY BAY Yacht Club on Selby Bay was the scene of the mid-summer rendezvous of the Potomac River Power Squadron over the weekend.

Commodore Walter Podgrod and his flag officers played hosts to the skippers as some 60 odd Potomac mariners and their families were treated to a well-rounded program of entertainment and a buffet shore dinner.

Added to the festivities of the day was the final practice navigation contest in preparation for the 5th District Rendezvous to be held August 18-19-20 at Maryland Yacht Club, Fairview, Md.

Potomac squadronites are now the not-too-proud possessors of the Sour Puss Trophy, indicative of their mediocre prowess at last year's gathering. All hands are determined to pass along the grotesque honorarium this year.

Winners of Sunday's contest were: Commodore Water Podgrod in Arlene, 17 seconds late; Lendall W. Hewitt in Takoma 3:24 early and Past Commodore Charles M. Little in Pilot, 4:5 late. Meanwhile, P. R. P. S. skippers are cramming over charts and navigation rules, pointing to this month's district contest.

JOE PALMER, widely known Arlington speedboat ace, had himself a bit of tough luck Sunday at the Wissanoming Yacht Club regatta on the Delaware River. Setting a terrific pace for the pack in the second heat of the 135 c. i. hydro event, Palmer came screaming under the bridge on the hazardous course.

With victory virtually assured, his port sponson tore loose, the boat Miss Esslinger was completely demolished and sank out of sight. Palmer was thrown clear of the wreckage but fractured his arm and several rigs. After hospital treatment Palmer returned to Washington minus the Miss Esslinger.

Ask Fazio, Stevens

Hole-in-One Costs Golfer About $150

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

GEORGE FAZIO, Woodmount pro, and Clagett Stevens, Manor pro, were discussing holes-in-one. Stevens estimates that it costs a member of his club at least $150 to score an ace. (Picking up the tab for drinks all around). Fazio remarked that he has made only one hole-in-one—when he was a 16-year-old, at the Jeffersonville course in Philadelphia. Stevens has two aces to his credit, one made at Congressional in 1933 and the other at Richmond, Indiana, in 1938.

Charley Carter, who has played golf six times in his life, got his first par on the fifth at Rock Creek. Shot a 49 for nine holes. Par for the route is 34.

The Maryland State Golf Association has three important events on its August schedule. A women's field day will be held at Elkridge Country Club in Baltimore, Friday, August 4; a mixed two-ball tournament at Chevy Chase, Friday, August 11, and the State Father and Son championship at Kenwood, Sunday, August 27.

East Potomac has been having trouble with "trigger happy" golfers who shoot too soon—before the players ahead of them have gotten out of the way. Pro Al Tredor was beaned and so was another, unidentified player.

John Driscoll asks if they used to make golf balls better in the good old days? Louis Yockelson gave him an 18-year-old ball in perfect condition, and in tests on the driving range at East Potomac, Driscoll claims he made 25-30 extra yards every time with the older ball.

Frances Schultz broke 40 for the first time in her golf career with a 39 at Rock Creek . . . "Mr. Charlie," 76-year-old youngster, known to generations of publinx golfers as starter at the various public courses, still shoots in the 90s . . . That new public course, Glenbrook (the old Woodmont club) operates on a straight per-day fee basis. For a buck you can play as many rounds as you want on a weekday. The ante goes up to $1.50 on weekends.

the juniors, an honor reflecting his victory in the Eastern Interscholastic tournament, and his runner-up position in the National Interscholastics, which were taken by Richardson.

Drawing a bye in the first round, Ted will meet Herbert Browne, of Columbia, S. C., in a second round contest.

Coss, the Washington junior titlist, who holds a victory over Rogers in the District of Columbia interscholastics, is unseeded, but regarded with a great deal of respect by his rivals.

Three Washington area youngsters are entered in the boys division, for 16-year-olds and under. One of them, Donald L. Dell of Bethesda, Md., 12 years old and weighing 84 pounds, is perhaps the smallest plyayer in the tourney although he has four years of experience behind him. His brother, Peter Dell, 15, and Malcolmn Leith, 15, of Chevy Chase, complete the District entrants.

Leith's record, outstanding for a player of his age, includes victories in four important events—the Friends School invitational, the Massachusetts State championships, the District of Columbia championships and the Middle Atlantic championships.

All three Washington boys drew byes in the first round. In the second round play Donald Dell meets Pete Green of West Palm Beach, Fla., Peter Dell faces John Brownlow of South Euclid, Ohio, and Leith opposes Robert Ewing, jr., of Wheeling, W. Va.

MEN OVER 25 WITH THINNING HAIR... give it this special care in summer
GROOM IT WITH KREML

TO AVOID A HOT, GREASY, SHINY-LOOKING SCALP
TO MAKE HAIR LOOK MORE ABUNDANT!

If your hair is thinning or receding at temples—don't keep gluing it down with greasy, sticky products which emphasize your sparse locks more—which leave an uncomfortably hot, dust-catching, shiny-looking film on the scalp. Now definitely is the time of year—the time in your life—to graduate to the famous Kreml Hair Tonic!

Even on hottest summer days, Kreml keeps hair looking healthy and handsome—never greasy or plastered down. And Kreml alone has this special combination of rare ingredients to groom hair so that it looks thicker—like more than you've got. Kreml always feels SO CLEAN—SO COOL on your scalp. Also great to remove dandruff flakes and lubricate dry, sun-baked hair.

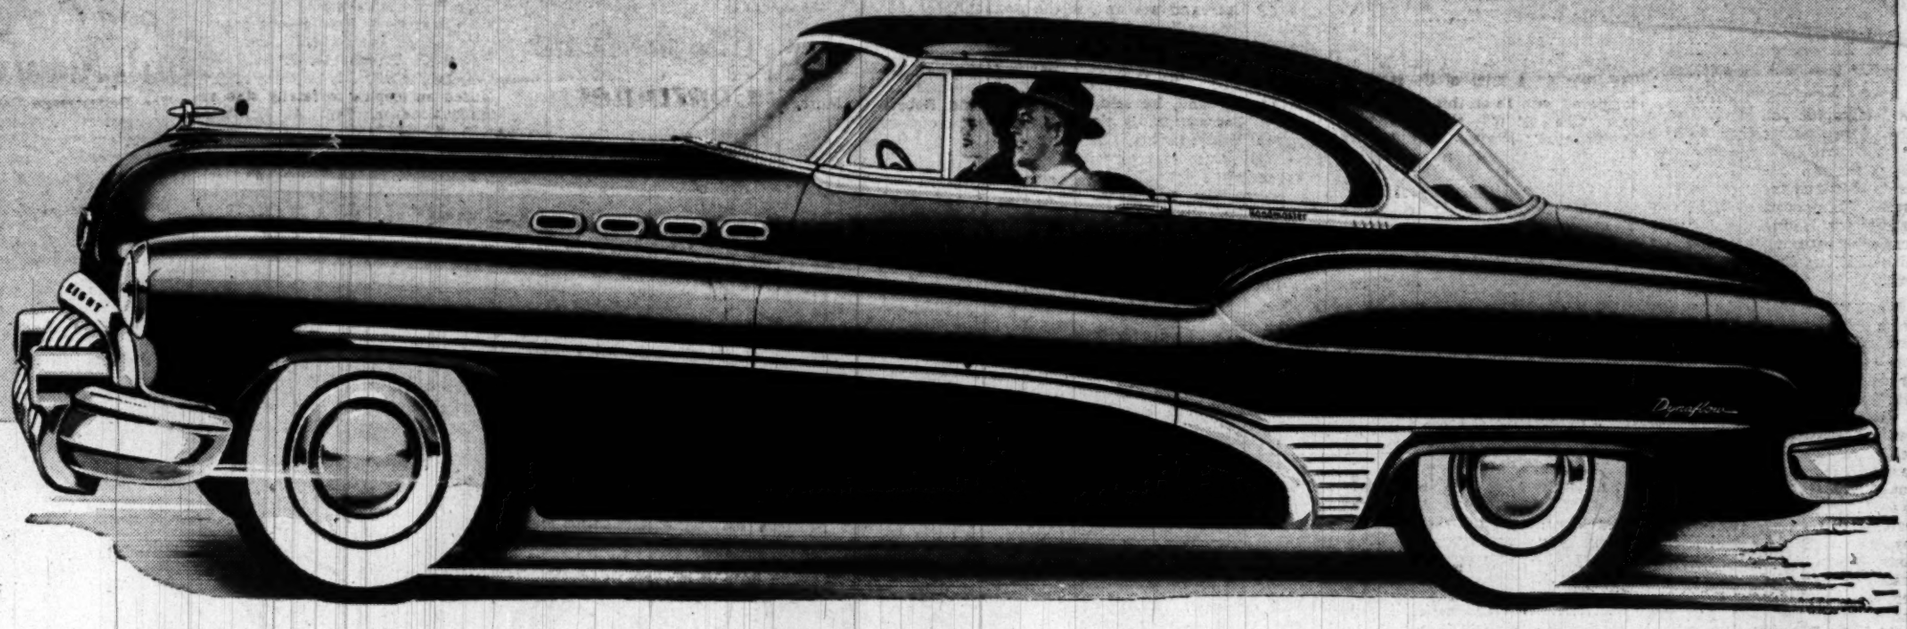
First of the Fine Cars in Value



Even Wiser than He Seems

PLAINLY, here travels a man wise in the ways of fine motorcars.

You know that, by the four Ventiports and the rich sweep of chrome which mark his car as a ROADMASTER.

You know it, should you trail him on the highway, by the smooth lift of the big Fireball power plant at his toe's command, by the obvious levelness of the ride he enjoys, the swift ease with which Dynaflow Drive solves his traffic problems.

What is not so plain from what you see is that here also is a man very wise in what today's dollar should buy!

For this man has all that a fine-car owner can ask for—brilliant performance, a ride without equal for gentle softness, finger-easy handling, abundant room all around him, styling that is easily the most distinguished on the highway.

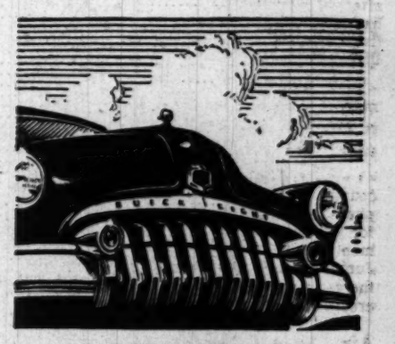
Yet he paid considerably less than comparable merit costs elsewhere.

He found fewer extra charges in his delivered price, with such things as Dynaflow Drive, foam rubber cushions, windshield washers, electric clock, even non-glare rear-view mirror included in the price.

If you know fine cars, it won't take fifteen minutes behind a ROADMASTER wheel to see that here is one of the finest.

If you have inquired about prices, a single glance at the delivered figures establishes this as the big buy of the field.

Why not make both checks—especially since your Buick dealer will be glad to arrange a trial run in a ROADMASTER any time you care to call on him?



FOUR-WAY FOREFRONT
This rugged front end (1) sets the style note, (2) saves on repair costs — vertical bars are individually replaceable, (3) avoids "locking horns," (4) makes parking and garaging easier.

Only Buick has Dynaflow Drive* and with it goes:

HIGHER-COMPRESSION Fireball valve-in-head power in three engines. (New F-263 engine in SUPER models.) • NEW-PATTERN STYLING, with MULTI-GUARD forefront, taper-through fenders, "double bubble" taillights • WIDE-ANGLE VISIBILITY, close-up road view both forward and back • TRAFFIC-HANDY SIZE, less over-all length for easier parking and garaging, short turning radius • EXTRA-WIDE SEATS cradled between the axles • SOFT BUICK RIDE, from all-coil springing, Safety-Ride rims, low-pressure tires, ride-steadying torque-tube • WIDE ARRAY OF MODELS with Body by Fisher.
*Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER and SPECIAL models.

Economic Mobilization Plan Gives NSRB Power To Allot Goods, Services

The National Security Resources Board would be given the power to fix civilian and military requirements of goods and services under an economic mobilization plan to be recommended to the President.

The proposal was drawn up over the weekend by a staff representing the White House, Budget Bureau, NSRB, and several departments.

Half a dozen agencies would carry out NSRB's decisions and directives. They would have the operating jobs. The NSRB would make the vital decisions, such as how much steel should be allocated to military uses; whether auto, TV, and home appliance production, should be cut back, if and when, and how much scarce goods should be rationed to consumers.

The plan calls for the creation of a score or more of industry committees in the Commerce Department to do the actual operating jobs. The committees, through the Commerce Secretary, could recommend policy changes to the NSRB. A steel committee would be set up to ration and allocate steel to essential users under NSRB direction, for example.

The Labor Department would handle manpower problems; Interior, oil and gas and natural resources generally, and Agriculture, food problems, all under NSRB direction. These departments, too, would set up labor, industry, and farm committees to do the operating chores.

The proposed mobilization pattern was taken from the organization chart of the World War II War Production Board. The WPB had the basic requirements and program committee, which NSRB would set up. It also had industry committees.

It's no secret that some officials have their doubts about the plan. If the President accepts it, they predict, it will be temporary, and eventually a new agency with supreme powers, similar to WPB, will be set up along the lines advocated by elder statesman Bernard Baruch.

AFGE: Henry Iler appears to be a sure shot to be elected president of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes to succeed James Yaden, who died recently.

The union's executive council will meet here Wednesday to name Yaden's successor. Its constitution requires a meeting of the council to elect a president by a majority of those "present and voting."

A telegraphic poll shows Iler, a Labor Department official, to have a 11-to-7 majority. However, several committee members will be unable to attend the extraordinary session. The opposition is supporting Bernice Heffner, the union's secretary-treasurer, to head the union until its Omaha convention next month.

Police 5-Day Week Bill May Reach House Today

McMillan to Seek Action; Pay Funds Included in $818,670 Budget Estimate

President Truman yesterday sent to Congress an $818,670.30 District supplemental budget estimate, of which $646,000 would be to pay the cost of a five-day week for the police.

The bill to put the police on the shorter work schedule, however, is still awaiting final House action. Chairman McMillan (D., S. C.) of the House District Committee had hoped to bring up the Senate version yesterday and ask the House to agree to it. But he couldn't obtain floor time. He may today.

Another $100,000 in the Truman estimate would go to pay for the day care centers through next June 30 while $71,500 would be for the zoo and $1,170.30 to pay a tax judgment due George A. and Armen Nazarian.

There is revenue enough in the city's till to pay all these amounts but Congress must appropriate the money first.

It was not clear yesterday just what effect the new House Appropriations Committee drive to prune nondefense items would have on the District. In addition to the items submitted yesterday there are still pending in that committee a $290,000 item for civil defense and additional money to continue rent control administration and other District activities.

9 New Polio Cases Listed In D. C. Area

Nine new cases of polio were reported in Greater Washington yesterday, increasing the area total for the year to 66.

Three cases were in the District making a total of 39 cases, compared with 13 on this date last year. The victims—all admitted to Children's Hospital July 29 and 30—are: a 10½ months old boy of the 2000 block of 11 st. nw.; an eight-year-old boy of the 5000 block of Blaine st. ne., and a 10-year-old boy of the 5000 block of E. Capitol st.

The Alexandria Health Department reported two cases, increasing the city's total to four. They were a 3-year-old boy of the 100 block of Yale dr., admitted to Children's on July 21 and since discharged, and a 2-year-old boy of the 900 block of Potomac ave., admitted to Children's July 28.

Arlington's fifth case of the year was reported to the County Health Department by a private physician who identified his patient as a 25-year-old woman of the 3000 block of S. Four Mile Run dr. She was admitted to Alexandria Hospital on July 22 and discharged several days later.

In Montgomery County two new cases were reported, raising the county total to seven. They were listed as a 3-year-old girl of the 300 block of Hillmore dr., Silver Spring, Md. who was admitted to Children's Hospital last Friday, and a 12-year-old boy of Rockville, Md., admitted to Children's last Saturday.

Prince Georges County reported two cases for a total of 11. They are a 1½-year-old girl of the 100 block of 59th ave., Capitol Hills, Md., who entered Children's July 26, and a 6-year-old boy of the 100 block of Aubrey la., Glass Manor, Oxon Hill, Md. who was admitted to Children's July 25. This last case was previously reported as a District case, but was transferred yesterday to the Prince Georges polio listing.

Wythe County Polio Toll Stands at 102

Wytheville, Va., July 31 (AP).—Wythe County's polio toll since July 1 shot to 102 cases today with the report to the State Health Department of 8 new cases since late Friday night.

Several of the cases had been listed from the county prior to today, but not by State officials. The weekend death of the 21-year-old father of a little girl who died two weeks ago of the disease sent the area's fatality toll to 12.

Sam Horowitz, Nobody's Slave, Will Give Away Pennies Today

You know what you have to do to give away money to kids in a park around here? You have to go to Ed Kelly, the superintendent of National Capital Parks, to get permission.

Ask Sam Horowitz of Chicago. He had to go yesterday.

Well, Ed Kelly doesn't mind so long as Sam obeys everything, so, today at 10:30 a. m., Sam gives away a couple of thousand shiny new pennies to kids at Lincoln Park. Also bubble gum, balloons and key chains.

Sam does these things all over the country, especially in Chicago. Has newspaper clippings to prove it.

Sam can't read the clippings but he knows what they say. Sam knows a lot of things.

For instance: "If I learn to read, I'm a slave for somebody else. Like this I got my own bag and burlap business in Chicago. I'm no slave."

When Sam, who is 55, was a kid in Chicago, he never had any of those things—bubble gum, balloons or shiny pennies.

So now, when he gets a few bucks ahead, he goes around making sure kids have those things.

Sam also leaves a little sermon on discrimination. People are all alike, he says on a little card with his picture, which he gives out.

Sam gives out a warning, too: Please, no donations or contributions. "Somebody tries to give me money, I lose all my pep," says Sam.

Sunday School Annex Facing New Setback

Hyattsville Church Seeks Exception to Zoning Board Rule

Another stumbling block loomed yesterday in the path of efforts of the Hyattsville Presbyterian Church to legalize its partly completed Sunday School annex.

The church, through its attorney, T. Howard Duckett, yesterday notified the Prince Georges County Board of Zoning Appeals of its desire to seek an exception of building line setback regulations to permit completion of the structure. Work was stopped after the Maryland-National Park and Planning Commission revoked its building permit issued "in error."

However, Blair Smith, who doubles as executive secretary and counsel to the appeals board, expressed doubt that the board can legally hear and act on the petition.

The original church structure, at 42d ave. and Farragut st., constitutes a present non-comforming use of the land, he said, as its front on Farragut st. is closer to the street than permitted under zoning regulations adopted after its construction.

The board does not have, in Smith's opinion, the right to extend a non-conforming use.

Present zoning laws enacted in 1949 by the County Commissioners eliminated a suggested paragraph which would have given the board this right, he pointed out. From this elimination, he said, the "intent" of the commissioners was "obviously" to deny this power to the board.

The church's present difficulty stems from the fact that the annex is being built too close to 42d ave.—by 12 feet. A recent Circuit Court ruling declared the building to be in violation of zoning laws, but permitted time for an appeal to the zoning board before ordering the building torn down.

Nonmobile 'Buys' Sold for $790 At Auto Auction

There were bargains galore at the Metropolitan Police Department auto auction yesterday, but few could leave the lot under their own power.

Thirty cars and three boats went for $790. Highest bid was $65 for a 1937 Tudor Ford; lowest, $1 for a scow. Most of the vehicles went to junk dealers for parts, and were towed away.

The items were all lost or abandoned before being turned over to the police property yard at 6th and School sts.

Two Sentenced to Jail For Man's Eye Injuries

Two persons were sentenced to jail yesterday in Municipal Court for injuring the eyes of Robert Wheeler, 27, of 111 L st. sw., July 30.

The injuries were inflicted during a fight July 30 in Allen's ct. sw.

Eva Graham, 37, 336 L st. sw., got 360 days for using a bottle on one of Wheeler's eyes. Clarence D. Buchanan, 50, got six months for using a toy gun on the other eye.

Top U. S. Criminal Prosecutor Resigns to Enter Law Firm

John M. Kelley, jr., the Justice Department's No. 1 criminal prosecutor, will resign August 4 to join his former boss in private practice at Fort Wayne, Ind.

Kelley

Kelley will become the trial attorney in the firm of Alexander M. Campbell, former chief of the Justice Department's criminal division and Democratic candidate for Senator from Indiana.

In seven and a half years with the department Kelley prosecuted some of the Government's most important criminal cases. He tried and convicted Mildred (Axis Sally) Gillars on treason charges, Judith Coplon for espionage, Mayor James Curley of Boston for mail fraud, and former Communist Carl Marzani for perjury.

Before joining the Justice Department in 1943, Kelley practiced law in Fort Atkinson, Wis. Kelley lives with his wife and four children at 3207 Gunston rd., Parkfairfax.

Insp. Miller Faces Medical Board Today

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, who was promoted to the rank of an assistant police superintendent just four months ago, will appear before the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons today.

Insp. Miller

He said he has been suffering from arthritis and a back injury he received last fall when he slipped from the running board of his car. For almost a month he has been on sick leave.

If the board recommends his retirement—and if the recommendation is approved by the Police Retirement Board—it will mean the promotion of a captain to inspector.

Police observers see the most likely candidates as Capts. Beverley C. Beach, of the Seventh Precinct, and Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of detectives.

Miller, 53, recognized nationally as a traffic expert, has been in charge of the reactivated Police Academy and the traffic and rookie schools since April.

Born in Stafford County, Va., Miller came to Washington in 1917. After taking a business college course and working at the old American National Bank, he joined the police department in March, 1919.

He was made a sergeant in May, 1928; a captain in July, 1935, and traffic inspector in June, 1940.

As a captain, he attended the Northwestern University Traffic Institute in 1939-40. Upon graduation he delivered the class valedictory.

His 10 years as traffic inspector resulted in the organization of the AIU—the Accident Investigation Unit—and other traffic department innovations.

Twice he refused promotion to the rank of an assistant superintendent—first, because it meant night duty, and second, because of his recognition as a traffic expert.

Inspector Miller, who has received four commendations, lives at 7804 Radnor rd., Bethesda.

Airport Bill Indorsed by House Unit

Measure Now Goes To Full Committee; Annandale Likely Site of Terminal

The proposed new 14-million-dollar Washington area civilian airport moved a step ahead in Congress yesterday.

A House Interstate Commerce subcommittee approved without a change the measure recently passed by the Senate which would have the Civil Aeronautics Administration construct and operate the field.

The bill contains no mention of a site for the huge terminal but the general feeling has been that it probably would be located in the Annandale, Va., area, not far from the Shirley Highway and hence easily accessible to the city. The House subcommittee, headed by Representative Beckworth (D., Tex.) last week took a flying tour of the area to have a look at five undisclosed possible sites.

The measure, which now goes to the full committee, is merely an authorization bill. Money would have to be appropriated later.

House Unit Approves Move Toward Canal Parkway

The House Public Lands Committee yesterday approved the bill to turn the C. & O. Canal into a modern parkway from Great Falls to Cumberland, Md.

The measure would authorize the Interior Department and the State of Maryland to swap parcels of land, or to accept them as gifts, so that a 100-acre-per-mile right of way would be available for the length of the parkway. A swap between the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, owner of the canal, and the Government also would be authorized.

An Interior survey, ordered by the Eightieth Congress, recently indicated the project is feasible. No money has been asked by the Administration, however, to fill in the old canal and surface it as a roadway.

Showers Today

July's Over But the Rain Continues

August will begin with scattered afternoon showers today and a high temperature near 90 degrees, according to the Weather Man.

July ended with a day during which the mercury climbed from 71 at 6:22 a. m. to 92 degrees at 4:55 p. m.

Reviewing the month just ended, the Weather Man's figures showed July was slightly cooler but rainier than usual.

The 92 recorded yesterday and Sunday were the month's high marks and the 62 degree July 22 the month's lowest. Average high temperature was 84.3 degrees; the low, 68.0. Normal high for July is 86.3; normal low, 67.3.

Precipitation in July totaled 5.11 inches. The normal is 4.71. There were 16 days with measurable amounts of rain, in contrasts with the average 11 days. There were five clear days, the average is 11; eight partly cloudy days, average is 12; 18 cloudy days, average is eight.

There were 247 hours and 30 minutes of sunshine or 55 percent out of a possible 452 hours, 29 minutes of sunshine. The average is 64 percent.

On five days the temperature was 90 degrees or more, in contrast to the average 10 days.

Pepco Files Maryland Rate Hike Request

The company also is asking a rate increase in Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Shot Wife, Self in April

Machinist Who Sought Death Finds It Under Calvert St. Span

Last April Claude O. Foy, 42, a Naval Gun Factory machinist, shot his wife, Vivien, in the head, then critically wounded himself with a second bullet. Despite the odds against them, both pulled through. Yesterday Foy was found dead in the brush under the Calvert st. bridge. A note in his pocket indicated domestic troubles, which he once told police had led to the shooting, had never ended, police said.

Foy

Foy's crumpled body was found about 3:30 p. m., by two boys who were scouting through the brush. They ran to the roadway and hailed a cab driver, Melvin Smith of Hyattsville, Md., who called police.

Police said Foy apparently had plunged from the bridge, although no one saw him leap. His body was removed to the morgue, where an autopsy will be performed today. Police said he had been dead since early morning or late Sunday night.

The note was unaddressed but apparently was meant for his two children, police said. The handwriting will be checked to make sure it is that of Foy. The two children are Betty, 17, and Robert, 13.

Last April 6, Foy shot his wife in the second-floor bathroom of their home at 1816 22d st. se. Then he shot himself in the head. He told police his wife had threatened to leave him and take their children, police said.

Mrs. Foy, 34, was admitted to Casualty Hospital, where she is still a patient.

Foy was admitted to Gallinger Hospital and released on April 22. He appeared that same day in Municipal Court and was ordered held for grand jury action on a charge of assault with intent to kill, on his wife. Released under $5000 bond, he was awaiting trial on the charge at the time of his death.

Hazard Hints

2 To treat insect bites, remove the stinger if the bug left it with you. Paste of baking soda or a cold compress with ammonia water will be soothing.

If a sea nettle stings, remove the slime with soupy wet sand. Then bathe with half strength household ammonia and follow with a burn ointment.

Bolling Man Indicted in Cabby Slaying

First-Degree Murder Charged to Private in Confessed Plot to Rob

Pvt. Gilbert W. Reynolds, 18, of Bolling Air Force Base, was indicted yesterday on a first-degree murder charge in the fatal shooting of cabdriver Gordon C. Brown, jr., 224 Carmody Hills dr., Seat Pleasant, Md.

The indictment, in two counts, was returned before Judge Edward A. Tamm in District Court. One count is for murder with "premeditated malice" and the other for murder in a robbery attempt.

Reynolds was arrested by police after hundreds of the members of the base were questioned.

It was there, on May 27, that the 24-year-old Brown was shot through the head and dumped from his cab.

According to police, Reynolds admitted the crime. He told them finally, police said, that he tried to rob Brown to pay a $2000 debt of his (Reynolds) grandmother in Sayre, Pa. Reynolds said he was frightened by a noise as he reached for Brown's wallet.

Charged with second-degree murder in another indictment was Paul G. Friend, 41, of 1118 22d st. nw. According to police Friend used an icepick to fatally stab an acquaintance, Paul A. Williams, 34, of 1130 Reed's ct. nw.

Police Say Cabbie Admits $55 Holdup At Gas Station

A cab driver who parked his cab far from home and traveled to and from it by bus, was arrested yesterday on a robbery charge by patient police.

Monteria Drummond, 30, of 920 46th st. ne., was accused of the hold-up and robbery Sunday night of Jeff Trayner, 30, an attendant at New's Shell Service Station, 4131 Minnesota ave. ne. Police said he admitted taking $55 from Trayner at gunpoint.

Trayner got the license number of the cab in which the holdup man escaped, police said. Early yesterday they spotted the cab in the 1200 block of Oates st. ne., 3 miles from Drummond's home. They waited there throughout the day and finally, late in the afternoon, Drummond got off a bus nearby and got into the cab. He was arrested on the spot.

Police said the driver's face card in the cab had Drummond's picture on it but the name and address of another man. Drummond told them he had found the card and altered it, they said.

Bus Line to Get Properties Back

Richmond, Va., July 31 (AP).—Properties of the Washington, Virginia and Maryland Coach Company, Inc., of Arlington, which have been under State control since last November 2, will be returned to private operation at 12:00 a. m. Tuesday.

An executive order to this effect was issued today by Governor Battle after he had received official notice of a contract agreement between the company and local 1079 of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America (AFL.)

Last Saturday State Labor Commissioner E. M. Boggs, announced settlement of the eight-month-old contract dispute which resulted in the State taking over operation of the bus firm to prevent an interruption of service.

Soldier, 17, Held in Theft Of 3 Autos

A 17-year-old soldier, who found Union Station Plaza a well-stocked car lot, was turned over to Army authorities yesterday after telling police he stole three cars from the Plaza Friday and Saturday.

Arrested late Sunday in College Park by Maryland State police for a traffic violation, he is Pvt. Robert M. Trader, who told police his home is in Freemont, W. Va. Police said he has been AWOL from an Air Force base in San Antonio, Tex., for 35 days.

One of the cars he admitted taking is owned by Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), police said.

Trader told police he took the first car Friday, drove it until it ran out of gas; then abandoned it at 8th and Van Buren sts. nw. Police said the car is owned by Christine B. Hanak of 4334 F st. se.

He said he then returned to the Plaza and took Senator Byrd's car, police reported. He told them he drove it into Rock Creek Park and slept in it during the night. He also told them he hit a truck at New Hampshire ave. and Ray rd. nw., while in Byrd's car. When the car was found abandoned and out of gas in the 700 block of 9th st. nw. Saturday, the left fender was bent and the headlights were broken, they said.

Trader, returned to the Plaza for the third time Saturday and took an auto, owned by Thomas Musser, Gaithersburg, Md., police said. He was driving it at the time he was arrested. He told police he had no money and hadn't eaten during his three-day stay here

Ex-Shimon Aides Called in Probe Into Hush-Hush Conspiracy Case

Two detectives who formerly worked with Police Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon were haled before the District grand jury yesterday to testify in a "hush-hush" wire-tapping case.

Justice Department officials would not comment, but it was learned the officers were summoned to testify both as to wire-tapping and criminal conspiracy charges.

They are John McHale, now in the Missing Persons Bureau, and George H. Robison of the Sex Squad. McHale, once Shimon's chief assistant, testified for more than an hour and Robison was before the grand jury 30 minutes.

Shimon, who worked for a decade as an investigator for the United States Attorney's Office, was transferred a year ago after his superiors began probing his activities.

The probe resulted in a still-secret report that, according to published accounts, contained a statement by one of Shimon's subordinates that he arranged to tap Howard Hughes' telephone during the Senate War Investigating Committee probe into the plane-maker's wartime contracts.

The Justice Department has been probing the matter ever since Shimon's transfer. He is now stationed at the Second Precinct.

Shimon could not be reached for comment, but recently he said the "only thing I know about it is what I read in Drew Pearson's column."

McHale and Robison declined comment during their afternoon's stay outside the grand jury room. Today at 2 p. m., Detective James G. Bryand, who also once was a Shimon aide, is to testify.

Special Assistant to the Attorney General James W. Knapp said he could say no more than that the case would be entitled United States vs. John Doe. He said he will be aided by Special Assistant L. E. Broome.

Recently, Chairman Matthew Neely of the Senate District Committee was denied the Shimon "wire-tapping" report by the Justice Department. It was reported, however, that part of the report he sought contains evidence that wire-tapping equipment was set up in the Carlton and Mayflower Hotels during the 1947 investigation of Hughes.

Multimillionaire Hughes and Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) made numerous charges and countercharges during the Senate investigation in 1947.

Nine Arrested, Food Cargo Still Missing

The Delicatessen Caper, a baffling mystery involving frozen frankfurters, whisky, tuna fish and a false alarm of fire, kept three detectives busy yesterday.

Nine persons were arrested and held for investigation, the frozen franks and half the tuna fish were recovered, but the whisky was still missing.

It all started at 12:30 a. m. Someone turned in a false alarm at Massachusetts ave. and 2d st. nw., and Scout Car 13 was dispatched to the scene.

En route Scout 13 drove through "Moonshine Alley," between Massachusetts and New Jersey aves. and North Capitol and Firsts., nw, where they saw one man drop a large package and flee.

Police recovered the package—six pounds of frozen hot dogs—and the man and two companions.

At this point, no one had reported any missing hot dogs. But at 10 a. m., the owner of Mac's Grill, 22 F st., nw., reported his store had been looted. Missing: Six pounds of frozen franks, plus 12 cans of tuna fish and nine cases of whisky.

Detectives Nick Genua, V. L. Antonelli, and A. L. Webber then returned to Moonshine Alley. They watched a group of men enter 45 F st. nw., with packages under their arms. They followed and in a second floor room found six cans of tuna fish.

In a woodshed behind the house the yfound an empty whisky case. The serial numbers on the case were those assigned to Mac's Grill. And six more men were arrested.

Half-Cent Boost In Milk Price Goes Into Effect

Major Washington dairies yesterday began charging ½ cent more for home delivered milk, following the increase authorized last week by the Virginia Milk Association.

Primary reason for the hike, distributors said, was increased cost of processing and the recent strike which upped costs by cutting the work week.

Grade A rose from 20½ cents to 21 cents; premium vitamin D and homogenized from 21½ to 22 cents. Some dairies also raised cream prices from 21 cents to 21½ cents a half pint.

Heated Argument Over Coffee Price Leads to Cooler

Where he's going for the next 30 days, Truman Mars, 35, of 717 Mount Vernon pl. nw., won't have to worry about the price of coffee.

Nick Yakas, 59, proprietor of the Safeway Lunch, 806 K st. nw., testified yesterday in Municipal Court that Mars loudly protested that a dime was too much for the cup of coffee he ordered.

Yakas said he explained that just this one time it would be a nickel. The next day, according to Yakas, Mars agreed to pay a dime for it but walked out with some salt and pepper shakers.

On Sunday, Yakas said, Mars returned, paid a dime for coffee, then struck Yakas with a cocacola bottle. Yakas, admitted, however, he returned the blow.

Said Judge Ellen K. Raedy: "Thirty days in jail."

Gen. Markey Seeks GOP Nomination

Baltimore, July 31 (AP).—The itch to run for office broke out like a rash today as the deadline neared for filing declarations of candidacy, and two men were talking about taking on Senator Tydings.

Howard W. Jackson, four times mayor of Baltimore, wouldn't say so flatly, but he indicated he will file today or Tuesday for the Democratic nomination to the Senate.

Philip H. Dorsey, jr., formerly a State senator from St. Mary's County and now people's counsel to the Maryland Public Service Commission, let it be known that he is considering the race.

Senator Tydings has announced he will run for a fourth term in the fall elections.

Tydings filed formally for renomination for a fifth term a few hours before Markey made his announcement.

Deadline Tuesday

The deadline for filing declarations with the Secretary of State in Annapolis is midnight Tuesday.

Dorsey, a Leonardtown attorney, is a wheelhorse in the present administration of Governor Lane. He was elected State's attorney of St. Mary's County in 1926 and subsequently served as a member of the House of Delegates and a State senator.

Jackson said this about making the race:

"I have about made up my mind but I cannot give a definite answer now."

Jackson came to Baltimore many years ago from Havre de Grace, which is also Senator Tydings' home territory.

He was a potential candidate for governor in 1934, but withdrew in favor of the late Governor Ritchie.

Beaten in 1938

In 1938, he ran for governor but was defeated in the primary by Herbert R. O'Conor, who now is Maryland's other senator.

Jackson's statement touched off again a lot of speculation about what effect his entry into the Senate race will have on the gubernatorial primary campaign between Governor Lane and George P. Mahoney.

Voters of Virginia's nearby Eight District will ballot today on Democratic and Republican nominees for Congress.

Two-way contests will be decided by the voters of both parties. Democratic nominees are Representative Howard W. Smith of Alexandria, a veteran of 20 years in Congress, and Arthur F. Souther, attorney, while Republican aspirants are Tyrrell F. Krum of Vienna, and Hal Flood Hughes of Arlington, a real estate man.

Democratic ballots will bear the name of a third candidate who will not be participating actively in the primary. He is Lieut. Cmdr. H. Keaney Kopp of Alexandria, who withdrew from the race last week after the ballots already had been printed.

While the Congressional primary is the center of interest in the District's 15 counties and three cities, Arlington voting will be enlivened by a strictly local issue—a referendum on a proposed $500,000 bond issue for construction of public swimming pools. The expenditure has been proposed by County Democrats, who contend the pools can be self-sustaining.

In Arlington, a Statewide precedent will be set when voting machines will be used to tabulate the ballots in the county's 27 precincts. The county has rented 65 machines, to be distributed on the basis of population, with one machine to be assigned to each 500 voters.

The swimming pool bond issue referendum also will establish a local precedent, according to electoral officials. They say it will mark the first time a public expenditure has been decided in a primary election.

Polling hours in the nearby areas will be as follows: Alexandria City, 6 a. m to 6. p. m.; Falls Church City and Fairfax County, 6:30 a. m. to 7:30 p. m., and Arlington County, 7:30 a. m. to 8:30 p. m., all daylight time.

Other Eighth District communities are Loudoun, Prince William, Fauquier, Stafford, Culpeper, Orange, Madison, Louisa, King George, Goochland, Albemarle, Greene and Fluvanna counties and the city of Charlottesville.

2 Democrats File In Prince Georges

Two Democrats, not indorsed by the county organization, filed yesterday for Prince Georges County offices.

They were Charles F. Luebner, of University Park, a leader in the County Civic Federation who filed for judge of the Orphan's Court, and William A. Newman, of Suitland, for county commissioner.

James B. Berry, clerk to the Board of Election Supervisors, revealed that all party-indorsed candidates on both tickets have filed.

Three other unindorsed candidates filed earlier. They were Democrats Robert W. McCullough, of Beaver Heights, for State's attorney, and Frederick M. Coxen, of Hyattsville, for county commissioner, and Republican Edward J. (Ned) Waters, of Berwyn, for county commissioner. Today is the last day for filing.

11 Candidates File In Montgomery

Eleven more candidates were listed yesterday by the Montgomery County Board of Election Supervisors at Rockville, Md. Tonight at midnight is the deadline for filing for county offices.

Among those filing were:

Carr, 8812 Burning Tree rd., Bethesda, for the Democratic nomination for the same post; Wesley M. Morris, Laytonsville, for the Republican nomination for councilman-at-large; Thomas E. Smithsonian's Foraminifera Collection World's Largest

The Smithsonian Institution announced yesterday it is now the custodian of the world's largest collection of Foraminifera—microscopic marine animals whose fossilized shells aid searchers for oil-bearing geological strata.

In accordance with the will of the late Dr. Joseph A. Cushman, of Sharon, Mass., his unrivaled collection and that of the Smithsonian have been merged in order to facilitate administration and use of the material.

They are housed at the United States National Museum, under direct curatorship of Dr. Alfred R. Loeblich, who is in Alaska doing research on modern foraminifers.

Miss Ruth Todd, of the United States Geological Survey, who had charge of the collection in Sharon, has been assigned to Washington and will continue to work with the specimens. Dr. Cushman, who served with the Geological Survey, was the world's leading authority on Foraminifera.

Foraminifers, pencil point and smaller in size, are a form of protozoa. When the animals die they sink to the ocean bottom and contribute to the formation of limestone. Shelled foraminifers date from the Ordovician geological period, about 400,000 years ago. They are used in dating strata in oil prospecting.

They also provide a reliable index to the temperature and salinity of ancient seas, making possible a more detailed knowledge of the ancient world.

Of the nearly 30,000 species known, the Smithsonian now has a substantial majority.

Rush Is Smaller

Property Tax Returns Checked

It will be several days before District tax officials can determine how many Washington residents failed to file their personal property tax returns.

The deadline was midnight yesterday. All who missed this final date are subject to a penalty of 20 percent of the tax due.

The customary last-minute rush at the District Building was smaller than usual yesterday, with only 50 to 60 persons standing in line at one time during most of the day.

James L. Martin of the Tax Assessor's office, looks for the bulk of the city's returns in today's and tomorrow's mail. Returns postmarked not later than last midnight sneak under the tax wire.

The last check, made last Friday, indicated that about 21,000 of an expected 65,000 returns had been filed. Last year 58,000 were filed. The estimated 7000 increase results from a year-long door-to-door canvass.

KOREA

ITS IMPACT ON U. S. PUBLIC OPINION

Starting TOMORROW, The Washington Post will publish an EXCLUSIVE SERIES of eight reports by the Gallup Poll on how the American people are reacting to the grave military crisis in Korea and its underlying implications. These reports will deal with the following vital questions—

Would public opinion sanction our using the Atom Bomb if the U. S. gets into another war?

Which do the American people consider more important—that the U. S. stay out of another world war, or that Russian expansion in Europe and Asia be stopped?

How far is the public willing to go at this time in mobilizing the strength of the U. S.?

Should the U. S. help re-arm Western Germany? Japan?

What should be done about the Communists in the U. S.?

Should U. S. industry shift to all-out production now?

How will we pay for the war? What is the people's reaction to immediate increases in income taxes?

Oklahoma Senator Corrals Society For Big Steak Barbecue

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

THE SENATOR from the Sooner State, Robert S. Kerr, and Mrs. Kerr corralled society last evening out Kenwood Country Club way. Highest officials of the land, including the entire Senate and Oklahoma delegation to the House were entertained at an Oklahoma round-up complete with barbecue steaks and all the trimmings.

Sizzling platters heaped with roast corn, onions, tomotoes, cole slaw and baked beans were served with lemonade and soda pop. Fiddlers played while gentlemen guests chose partners for a lively series of square dances.

The less energetic listened to Wiley and Gene, Western entertainers who sang, danced and played the violin and guitar. It was a gala wind-up for Mrs. Kerr, who departed at dawn this morning for her summer house on Pelican Lake in Northern Minnesota. She will be there with the children until October.

Washington Honors "Down Under" Chief

WITH Australia's Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies a visitor in town, official entertaining has centered around this distinguished figure from "down under."

The Australian Ambassador and Mrs. Norman Makin were hosts at a large reception on Saturday afternoon and the Ambassador was among the guests at the stag dinner last evening given in honor of the Prime Minister by Secretary of State Dean Acheson at Prospect House.

Other guests were Comdr. Robert G. A. Jackson, member of the Prime Minister's party; S. G. McFarlane, Financial Counselor of the Australian Embassy; Senator Ralph E. Flanders; Representative L. Brooks Hays; Ambassador-at-large Philip C. Jessup; Deputy Undersecretary of State, H. Freeman Matthews; Assistant Secretary of State, George W. Perkins; Chief of Protocol John Farr Simmons; Henry R. LaBouisse and Livingston Satterthwaite, both of the State Department.

Helen Wade Home From Europe

A CHEERY voice on the telephone said: "It's Helen Wade." Mrs. Leigh Wade, wife of Colonel Wade, our Air Attache at the embassy in Athens, is back for a visit to her home town. Now visiting her sister, Mrs. John Shugrue, at Gibson Island, she was just up for the day when she called.

Helen Wade is very fond of the Greek people, loves the country, and altogether is thoroughly enjoying her tour of duty there. Since she's been in Greece, she has seen something of Europe, too, with visits to Vienna, Brussels, the Greek Islands and lots of German cities and towns.

Sings Way Around World

NAN GARCIA, who sings as prettily as a canary, never dreamed that she'd come so close to realizing her ambition. She once said she would like to work her way around the world.

Back in Washington for a short visit to Mrs. Martin Vogel, Nan has just finished a European tour which included also Cairo, Athens, Istanbul as well as Italy, Germany and Scandinavia. And in less than a year's time she's added Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro to her list.

Going over in the early spring as a sort of advance planning representative for Horace Heidt, Nan also sang with his band. Then she joined up with Col. George Howard and his Air Force Band and toured Germany with the unit as guest soloist.

She's been doing some writing about her experiences, too, and now has an offer from the Home Line steamship company to sing her way over and back from Europe anytime. In that connection she would also write an article on the countries she visits, to be translated into their own language.

'No Quorum' But Delegates See Royalty

London, July 31 (AP).—Many of the 2000 Business and Professional Women from 20 countries in session here today yielded to the same sort of temptation that makes an office boy sneak away to a ball game.

The afternoon meeting of the Fifth Congress of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women was due to start at Central Hall, near Westminster Abbey. But fewer than half the delegates were on hand, and the worried chairman said the convention simply would have to wait for a quorum.

The women who should have been in the auditorium were all out on the pavement around nearby St. Margaret's Church, hoping to get a glimpse of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth. With Princess Margaret and the Duke of Edinburgh, the King and Queen arrived at the church to attend the wedding of the Queen's niece, Miss Margaret Elphinstone, and Denys Rhodes.

The convention got down to its opening formalities 20 minutes late.

Marvella Wins Election; Her Goal: Girls' World

MISS MARVELLA BELLE HERN, a petite grey-eyed blond from Enid, Okla., was elected president of Girls Nation yesterday.

A candidate of the Federalist party, she defeated the Nationalists' candidate Miss Margaret Gruenther of Detroit, Mich.

Sally McFague of Milton, Mass., was chosen as vice president, defeating Judy Alexander of Montclair, N. J.

The girls, two of them from each State and Panama, formed their own political parties and carried out the elections last night as part of the six-day School for Citizenship sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary.

Although both parties offered substantially the same platforms, Marvella also campaigned for establishment of a Girls World.

"There'd be less fear in the world if we all knew one another better," she explained. Seventeen-year-old Marvella, whose father is a wheat farmer, already is well on the way to understanding the people of other parts of the world.

She maintains a steady correspondence with three 18-year-old European boys, whose names she received through her high school. Two are in Germany, one in the Russian Zone and another in the British Zone. The third lives in Greece.

Marvella is an only child and doesn't like it. "I'm going to have two children myself," she says confidently. First she's going to college and be a dietitian.

Red Cross Asks More Nurses Aides

With the continuing shortage of registered nurses in local civilian hospitals, an increased number of Red Cross nurses' aides are needed now to help in the hospitals.

An urgent appeal is being made for women who want to volunteer their time for such work. Those who are able to serve in the daytime are especially needed.

Classes will begin August 15, under the instruction of Mrs. Ruth Wood, a registered nurse.

Further information may be obtained by telephoning District Red Cross Nurse's Aide Service, Republic 8300, extension 371.

While They Meet the Attorney General

98 Girls Keep Defense Chief Waiting

By Norma Lanum

NINETY-EIGHT pretty teenage girls kept Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson waiting half an hour yesterday at his Pentagon office. But they couldn't help it. It was the Attorney General's fault.

The young ladies, all delegates to the Girls Nation, were to meet Secretary Johnson at 3:30 p. m. as part of their School for Citizenship sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary.

They had been touring Washington all day—the Supreme Court, the Senate and the Federal Bureau of Investigation. As the FBI tour drew to a close, they were ushered into a large private office with carpets on the floor and murals on the walls.

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath then walked in, introduced himself and sat down to give the girls a lesson on justice in the United States. He was using the Defense Chief's time in this unscheduled appearance but the girls didn't mind. They sat on the floor around him and listened, oh-ing and ah-ing to one another.

Theme of his informal address was the motto written over the door of his office: "Government wins whenever justice is done one of its citizens."

Then the Attorney General gave each girl an autographed copy of "Gateways to Citizenship," by Carl B. Hyatt, director of the Attorney General's Citizenship Program, Department of Justice. And the junior misses rushed to the chartered buses to take them to the Pentagon—and their meeting with the Defense Secretary.

Defense Group Waits at Pentagon

MEANWHILE a special contingent of service women, two each from each of the four services, was waiting at the main entrance of the Defense Building. They were the official escorts to take the teenagers from the buses to Mr. Johnson's office.

As 4 o'clock approached, the comment was "you just don't keep the Secretary of Defense waiting."

The minute the busses came to a halt at the Pentagon the girls were rushed up to the Secretary's second floor office where Mr. Johnson and his aides were ready to receive them—no mention of the delay.

Once all the girls had entered his office, the Secretary briefed them quickly on the Pentagon building and the old portraits and furniture in his suite of offices.

"Everything in here is antique," he commented, "except of course its occupants."

Then he praised the American Legion for its continued support for universal military training. "If we had adopted universal military training when it was first sponsored," he maintained, "We would not be in the fix we are in today."

One of the girls spoke up: "Don't you think 18 year olds who have to fight for their country ought to have the right to vote?"

"I'm the Defense Chief," Mr. Johnson said after a pause. "But I don't know how I'd defend myself after answering that one."

Following their tour of the Supreme Court building yesterday morning, the girls heard an address by Justice Harold Burton about the significance of the Constitution.

Then they proceeded to the District of Columbia Caucus Room of the Senate to hear a speech by Senator Herbert Humphrey of Minnesota. He described the principles of a representative government.

Politics Open Field, Mrs. Edwards Says

LAST evening Mrs. India Edwards, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, told the Girls Nation they have a "wide open field to run for political office."

She spoke during the evening program at the Mount Vernon Seminary where the delegates are staying throughout their six-day sessions on the Federal Government.

Mrs. Edwards advised the girls to study the local political organization in their own hometowns and to volunteer their services.

Tobé Says...

What About Fall Skirt Lengths?

You've probably heard alarming rumors about how short skirts will be this fall. You can discount those to a great extent. Skirts are shorter—but only a little—an inch or two at the most.

Now that the fashion hullabaloo that always arises at the time of the first fall showings is over, the consensus is that skirts will be about fourteen inches from the floor for the woman of average height. If you are shorter, it will be less; if taller, an inch or two more. I'd say that a good personal gauge to follow is to have your skirts just clear the curve of the calf.

That's not extreme is it? Just a pretty length, I think.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl Longs to Marry Older Man She Dearly Loves, But Couldn't Be Happy Without Parents' Consent, Which Isn't Forthcoming; How to Solve Conflict?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am in love with a very wonderful, deep and high-minded man, who professes to love me in return. He is 10 years older than I, and we are of different creeds; but he is willing to be married in my church, and he agrees to rear our children (if any) in my religion.

When I first met Louis, he was so eager to impress me that he began lying about his past. And somewhat later he told me (falsely) that he had consulted certain church officials about our marrying. Upon inquiry my mother learned he hadn't been near these men, and as a result my parents lost all faith in him.

They say no good can come of our association, that Louis is a confirmed liar and not the man for me; and that I must give him up and try to forget him. He is forbidden to come to our house or to try to see me. They will never accept him nor consent to my seeing him. Thus as matters stand, I am forced to choose between my parents and the man I love.

I am of an age to make my own decisions and marry without my parents' consent. But I feel that I could never be happy if I were to hurt them or turn against them, even though I love Louis so much and could be so happy as his wife. I would appreciate your disinterested slant on this sorry impasse.

C. L.

Parents' Stand Seems Justified

DEAR C. L.: If Louis is 10 years your senior, and you are of legal age to marry without parental consent, then he must be about 30, I judge. This I mention because age has a bearing on the significance of falsifying.

The adult-age individual who has a habit of lying spontaneously, to conceal mistakes, anxieties, etc., or to make a pretense of being what he isn't, constitutes one of the world's worst matrimonial risks.

To go back a bit, when children lie doggedly, as many do at one time or another, ordinarily it means they are trying to stave off harrowing penalties for failure to please unsympathetic authority. Psychologists take a hopeful view of these deceptions. They interpret lying at that age-level as evidence that the child feels under attack for his social inadequacies, and without access to the adult help and understanding he sorely needs. He feels that evasive words are his only defense in a demoralized struggle for self-preservation, as he fences with forces that frighten him terribly.

In such case the child is more sinned against than sinning, obviously. And to rescue him from this dishonest drift, his mentors need to revise their supervisory attitudes for the better. Browbeating tactics should be discarded in favor of steady kindly encouragement from intimate authority, in the matter of behaving well—a form of psychological support that gives the child confidence in himself. Or call it self-esteem, the intrinsic good feeling that does most to help us achieve fine character.

Mind Befuddled by Infatuation

IN his sound book "The Challenge of Marriage" (Duell, Sloan & Pearce), Dr. Rudolf Dreikurs touches on the sorry significance of barefaced lying in adult years. It is the mark of a person who can't cope with trouble, who runs from problems that press for solution. Such a person cannot reliably fill a role of trust. And moreover, as some poet says, "The truth itself is not believed in one who often has deceived."

Thus it seems to me your parents have grave cause to turn thumbs down on Louis, who makes ready use of lies in courting you. They are talking sense in urging you to dismiss and forget him. Your theory that he is a wonderful, deep and high-minded character simply means that you are feverishly infatuated for the time being, with reason drugged by sex attraction. As the saying goes, you are crazy about Louis. Crazy indeed; and the problem isn't whether to choose between your parents and him; but rather, how to snap out of your foolish yen for him. If you need further restraining counsel, talk to your pastor or a reputable local psychologist.

LIVER WITH ONIONS AND GREEN PEPPERS

Ingredients: 4 thin slices calves' liver (½ to 2/3 pound), ¼ cup butter or margarine, 2 cups thin strips onion (2 large or 2/3 pound onions), 1 teaspoon sugar, 2 teaspoons soy sauce, salt, 2/3 to 1 cup thin strips green pepper (1 medium-sized).

Method: Cut liver in 1-inch squares, scraping away any tuber or membrane as you do so. Melt butter or margarine in a 10-inch skillet over moderately low heat; add onion strips and cook 5 minutes, stirring often. Sprinkle onion with sugar and soy sauce, stir and cover tightly; reduce heat to low and cook 5 minutes more. Push onion to one side of pan, but tilt pan so butter or margarine and pan juices cover bottom; add liver, increase to moderate heat, and cook and stir just until liver loses its pink color—this will take only a few minutes. Sprinkle liver lightly with salt, add green pepper strips and mix with onions. Cover tightly, turn off heat, but allow to stand for a few minutes to warm pepper. Serve immediately over hot cooked rice. Makes 2 to 3 servings.

Paris Fashion Forecast

Fine Feathers for Fall Have Furry Touch

PARIS, July 31 (AP).—If you buy yourself a necklet of fur—mink or rabbit will do equally well—you won't need to buy yourself any new clothes this fall.

For the simple, slim-lined dress with a neckhole rimmed in fur is the main feature of fall fashions paraded by the French couturiers here.

They have lowered hemlines a little and brought back the curved silhouette so we are right back where we started last fall.

The slim skirt is still favorite but it's either cut a little wider, made wrap-around or treated to tiny kick pleats or flounces near the hemline.

There are more full skirts than last year but except for cocktail and evening wear all fullness is very restrained and unevenly placed.

Bodices are extremely simple or swatched into a crossover effect which often develops into a loose hanging panel threaded through the waistbelt to dangle to hem level at one side.

Neckholes Are Rimmed in Fur

NECKHOLES, whether high and round or deep cut, are rimmed with fur. Sleeves are set-in, long and tight fitting and usually cuffed with fur to match.

Suit jackets are wide shouldered, narrow waisted and have long peplums that jut out and reach to the top of the thigh. Dior shows them belted and stiffened to reach out several inches away from the hips.

Seven eighth and three quarter length topcoats, both flared back and straight cut variety, are favored. The voluminous ones are lined with anything from astrakan, dyed Kelly green or crimson, to wild mink or ermine.

The black and white color scheme is widely used, particularly with white ermine or mink collars, set on black dresses and suits. Apart from this, colors mainly used are cigar or nut brown, shades from amber to burnt orange and lots of olive and drab green.

Wool Jersey A Favorite

THERE'S an enormous amount of wool jersey and broadcloth around for day wear, tweed for suits and heavy blanket velour and fleece for topcoats.

Collars are not important this season. They are either nonexistent or brief turndown affairs. Dior, however, shows a few that stand up in a draped effect to the ears.

The short evening dress is still being shown but the full-length dress seems more popular. Hobble numbers slit up the front have vast overskirts, sometimes puffed with a bustle.

The graduated hemline—ankle length in front, dipping down at the back—is widely shown.

Maggy Rouff Goes Spanish

PARIS, July 31 (U.P.).—A Spanish dancer's tight skirt with a deep ruffle around the bottom was the highpoint of Maggy Rouff's fall fashion collection today.

The Spanish idea was translated into day dresses with long, tight tunics with natural waistlines, broken at the bottom by flared or pleated underskirts. Some day suits had straight skirts, but hip interest was provided with slanting pockets high in front on peplums which formed a short swallow-tail movement toward the back. Rows and rows of buttons, down the front and back, were another decorative touch.

Introducing flashing winter white, Maggy Rouff placed a large white ermine bib on a black velvet suit with white fur cuffs. The bib was finished off with black-tipped ermine tails.

A gray wool cocktail dress had a false front of darker gray velvet, cut like a gilet. Velvet cuffs on three-quarter sleeves harmonized with the gilet. Two trim suits, one in cerise and the other in slate gray wool, had lapels, small cuffs and the fold of the straight envelope skirt accented with narrow black braid.

For the cocktail hour, Maggy Rouff named her models after drinks. "Vermouth" in black satin had two large ruffles breaking from the waist and sweeping toward the back over a flared skirt. The neck was deep and had one side draped.

Another, "dry" (for a dry Martini cocktail), had a high Russian neck, stiff four-inch sleeves, and a straight top decorated with gold beading over the bust. The skirt was straight.

She showed a "magic" diamond clip by Mellerio which is fastened to the bottom of the neck with no visible means of support. The answer is a suction cup. Although as safe as a necklace, the very invisible means of support made the model finger the brooch to see if it was still there.

The Spanish evening costumes were lavish and included tunics beaded with sparkling colored sequins, skirts in heavy satin with the "curtain drape" (bunched treatment), or the deep Spanish ruffle going to a train in back. One gold lame evening dress, with a simple halter top, had the flare of the skirt bordered in black fox fur.

Spartan Sleepers Nap Happily on Hair, But Others Prefer Springs

DEAR ANNE:

I have a quite thick hair mattress which I have inherited. I am wondering whether to keep it or get one of the modern inner-spring mattresses which are sold now. Are hair mattresses still considered the "tops" in sleeping comfort?

Also, I have inherited a feather bed—a real one, double bed size. It is stitched across in sections to hold the feathers in place. What could I do with this? At present I have it stored in a cedar chest.

C. B. C., Washington.

People who like a hard, firm mattress still sing the praises of hair mattresses. Those who prefer their bedding soft and bouncy haven't a kind word to say for the time-honored stuffing.

If you want a compromise, you might do this: Have the old hair mattress made over into a modern combination innerspring and hair mattress by one of the firms listed under "Bedding" in the yellow telephone book. This type of mattress has a firm surface but more comfortable "give" to it. Cost for such a job is a third to a half of what you would pay for a good, new innerspring. Chances are the old hair mattress needs reconditioning anyway.

Feathers in the old feather bed could be used nicely for pillows, if you have need for these. They're equally good for bed or sofa pillows. Bedding companies can clean and recondition them for you and make them into pillows.

DEAR ANNE:

My husband read an ad in a magazine about a Flower-of-the-Month Club. We have scouted around for it but are unable to find it. It is supposed to be a club or a group of florists who have gotten together and will send a different flower every month on a subscription basis.

Mrs. B. S., Washington.

I haven't been able to find such a club here, either. However, you can place a standing order with almost any of the local florists to have a bouquet delivered once a month. One I talked with has a list of the flowers representative of each month. He said this could be used in making up a floral gift particularly suited to the month each time.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me how to bleach some 6-year old white hand knits? They are baby things and have been stored. Now that I need them, I find them very dingy looking.

J. L. H., Arlington.

Mix a solution of warm, soapy water and sodium perborate; using one tablespoon of the latter to each pint of water. Soak things a half hour, then wash thoroughly in the suds and rinse. If not whitened enough, process can be repeated.

DEAR ANNE:

Should frozen meat be re-frozen once it has been defrosted?

W. L., Hyattsville, Md.

No. Once frozen and defrosted, it should be used immediately, not re-frozen.

DEAR ANNE:

We are building our home in the fall, and are going to have an informal dining room That is, we are going to have kitchen cabinets that open on both sides—in the kitchen and also in the dining room—with a "serve-through." The counter tops I would like to have in green formica, but I don't know if it will look right. Should it be in white or cream formica?

L. M. L., Washington.

I think the green tops will be quite attractive, especially if you use this color elsewhere in the color scheme of your dining room. Possibly the plain green, in a smooth or linen finish, would look less "kitcheny" than a mingled green.

DEAR ANNE:

About five or six months ago The Post had a feature article on home weaving and the people who gave such lessons lived in Bethesda. I am very much interested in finding out who they are. Do you think you could help me?

R. T. O., Bethesda.

The teacher mentioned in this article is now out of the city but will return the latter part of August. She lives at 7128 Hampden la., Bethesda, and her telephone is Wisconsin 4817. Right now, her calls are being taken by a friend, who also teaches weaving and whose number is Ordway 4532. This teacher lives at 2935 Northampton st. nw., in Washington, and she plans to start a class in September, too.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

Camp Fire Girls Urge Hoarding Ban

"Hoarding is harmful," say 360,000 Camp Fire Girls across the country as they launch their latest service project.

According to the organization's national president, Mrs. Richard W. Blalock, President Truman has been advised that members of the youth agency will ask shoppers to sign the following pledge:

Camp Fire Girls, the Homemakers of Tomorrow, ask you to sign this I-WON'T-HOARD pledge: I promise to purchase only what is necessary for the normal everyday needs of my family. I will not hoard items such as sugar, fats, nylons or canned goods.

Mrs. Blalock stated that Camp Fire's program has always stressed wise buying through its Home Craft, and giving service to and for the community through its Citizenship Craft. She said also that conservation of resources and consideration for the needs of others are two of the most important things a Camp Fire Girl learns.

Tommy's right. His neighborhood is just as big as the number of people with telephones.

That's why his folks—and so many others—look on their telephone as an all-important link with the rest of the community and the world.

It keeps them in touch with just about everything and everybody.
The doctor. The grocer. Relatives, near and far. The druggist.
The dentist. Friends, in and out of town.
The office. The theater. The beauty shop.
And lots more. Yet its cost may be measured in pennies per call.

Actually, the telephone takes a much smaller percentage of the average family budget than before the war.
Yes, telephone service keeps on being one of your biggest bargains.

How to Get a Husband

Living Alone Can Have Its Benefits, Too

By Cora Carlyle

LESS than twenty-five years ago, like telecasting and transatlantic flying, the girl who lived alone was a rarity. In those days no girl left the parental roof except to find another sanctuary under her husband's dwelling. The transition was swift and sudden. Society firmly believed that the sanctity of the home protected a girl from the evil intentions of men. The feeling about a girl living alone was so strong that in the event of her becoming widowed, she was expected to return to the old family hearthstone. Once in a while, some hardy pioneering soul made the break and went off on her own but she was considered one of the skeletons in the family closet. Even her closest friends secretly confided to each other that she was a "wild one." The general consensus was that no girl who lived alone could come to any good end.

Today, living alone is as acceptable for women as smoking and drinking publicly. Not an eyebrow is raised at the bachelor girl who maintains her own apartment as long as it's clean and well-run. Today, a room and a half is many a girl's sanctuary. She knows darn well that Papa's walls never staved off the advances of the Wolf and that real protection comes from knowing men and how to deal with them. She realizes full well that living alone and taking care of herself is one of the most useful experineces which life has to offer.

At some period, in the development of a modern girl, comes the desire to function as an individual—apart from the family—without necessarily wanting marriage.

There's the girl, for instance, who thoroughly enjoyed her independence at college and strongly believes she could develop into a more rounded personality away from home. Then there's the ambitious girl who found opportunities in her home town too limiting and goes to the larger city to try her wings. Or the girl who vainly tries to adjust her life and activities to the dictates of a large family and finally decides to stop the arguments by making the break. Or the lucky girl with the understanding family who gives blessing and consents to her living alone because they feel it's a healthy experience to be independent.

Good Training

WHATEVER your reasons for living alone, appreciate it also as a prelude to marriage. As such, it can be made to serve many useful purposes. The mysteries of maintaining a house in good order become an open book to the girl who runs an apartment. Checking the laundry, keeping the refrigerator well-stocked, instituting a cleaning system; all are good expereinces. Then the bride's traditional helplessness to boil an egg will not be one of your weaknesses.

The modern bride is expected to get breakfast with the efficiency of a Ford assembly line. The average, intelligent male, who treats you as an equal, will find nothing whimsical about your asking if the bubbling and steaming means that the water is boiling. Your friends may be amused at your orgy at the local hardware store; as you relate your purchases of enough shelving, thumbtacks and twine to service a hotel instead of two rooms. But Friend Husband who foots the bills would not laugh at the useless expense or the obvious dumbness of your purchases. The initiation into the problems of housekeeping, while on your own, will eliminate many a spat with your husband, in those early delicate days of marriage.

Challenge to Ingenuity

YOUR ingenuity in furnishing an attractive place should be taxed to the fullest because a room of charm and taste can stimulate a man's senses as much as anything else about you. He will respond to your apartment as he would to your looks, dress or habits . . . its decor is as much a real expression of your personality as they are. When you're living alone and don't have to pander to family taste, you no longer have the excuse that brother doesn't like modern art or that sister can't stand colorful chintz draperies. When Mr. Smith or Tony comes to call, he'll have a pretty good picture of what life would be like with you. The man-with-the-sisters will rearrange your furniture and let you in on the family secret of where hand blocked linen over-curtains can be had for practically nothing.

When you invite Mr. Rotarian, be sure that pictures of Ma and Pa are in prominent view. Their presence will help convince him you're not a prodigal daughter . . . rather that you're living alone means you're only delightfully daring and different. The intellectual's opinion of you will rise to new heights since you're living alone demonstrates to him both your courage and free spirit.

Flowers, tastefully arranged will charm any man who visits you—but ashtrays filled with ashes and butts will repel him like dirt under your fingernails. Plants, an odd pitcher picked up at the antique dealer on the corner, reproductions of famous paintings, one Victorian love-seat (if you can manage it) can convert a mediocre place into one where the unmistakable stamp of your individuality is obvious. Outside of the personal pleasure an attractive apartment can give, there is no more effective setting for the courtship period.

Now that the stage is set, the girl who lives alone need only give the right man his cue. Entertaining your friends easily and well soon comes under the category of routine stuff after the first few experiences. Even though it's just a two-burner electric stove over the hamper in the bathroom, it's yours for the lighting. Sunday's strategy calls for inviting the big moment in for scrambled eggs and steaming hot coffee. Later, to show off your versatility, you can even encourage him to bring his friends along.

We know of no more incontestable argument for marriage than the picture of a miss, immaculately trim in a brunch coat, pouring Mr. Right a second cup of coffee. His good sense tells him that he can't afford to let such a prize as you escape him. Even though he mightn't tell you so right away, chances are he will come to respect your ability to live alone and swing an apartment. More than likely, too, many of his resistances to marriage are broken down because of your economic independence. He will unconsciously develop a growing respect for the girl who has successfully feathered her own nest. Every man, no matter how protective he is, appreciates a genuine helpmate . . . a girl who can carry her own weight over the early rough spots before a couple establish themselves.

Strengthens Ego

ACTUALLY taking care of yourself is an enriching experience and often results in a strengthening of the ego. You've earned a living and balanced a checkbook. As a result, you go through life with the inner security that you've got what it takes . . . whichever way the winds of fortune turn.

Now the virtues of all this are fine; provided you don't make it a permanent state. Living alone should be a prelude to fuller living. The bachelor girl who loves her apartment and living alone so much that she doesn't see there are better things in life is making a serious error. If you are lulled into false security by the comfort and smooth running of your place, you are making a mistake. Don't be that girl!

Like everything else in life living alone has its unbuttered side. The mere physical setup of an accessible apartment is conducive to amorous advances. But the ingredients for a hurry-up romance are also all there—a man, a maid, a place. The girl who lives alone must be smart enough to realize what's inevitable and to avoid it if she chooses. It is obvious that some men will try to make love to you even within the hearing of your family, but when you live alone such advances are more common and come much sooner.

Should you ask the wolf to your place, you must be prepared to accept the consequences. The invitation to a nightcap can well be its own invitation to a wrestling match. The man can assume that's what expected of him . . . that's why you invited him in. The solution to the problem of the nightcap is simplicity itself—don't extend the invitation.

Most important is the decision of what you really want and what you'll enjoy and permit. When you back up your conviction even at the possible cost of losing the man forever, you'll have no trouble. He'll quickly perceive your attitude and take the cue from you. Naturally, he won't tolerate your blowing hot and cold. You can't lead any man on into thinking you're ready for an affair and then turn righteously indignant at his first advances. By entertaining in foursomes, not twosomes, you eliminate the need for fisticuffs.

Be Sure, Not Sorry

IF YOU don't know your own strength with the wolf, better be sure than sorry. Get yourself a roommate. Her presence, symbolic rather than literal, can reduce your chances of being prey. Great care, however, must be exercised in your choice of companion lest she overwhelm you with the difficulties she presents. Beyond the surface compatibility, she should be a person who respects your privacy. It is very irritating to meet a pair of curious eyes every time you put down the phone. When you come in from a date you don't want to be pestered with prying questions about where you went and what you did. Or else why did you leave home? And last but not least, you want to find your new white gilet in the drawer when you want to wear it—not around your roommate's neck.

Consideration is another important characteristic to look for in choosing a partner. You'll be muttering the old, old refrain, "Home was never like this," if you team up with a gal who decides to iron the very night you've invited the new man from the office, or who turns out to be the type who leaves her underthings strewn all over the place. All burdens need to be equally shared. There's no getting along when one girl does all the managing while the other does all the upsetting.

Another roommate to be avoided is the over-dependent sister—the kind you can't leave alone but must drag along on dates . . . avoid her like poison ivy. There is nothing a man resents more than the spare tire he must include in his evening's entertainment. To him, she's just an expense and an intruder. Even though a roommate may halve the economic burden, if she can't stand on her own two feet, the load of her dependency will wear you down and keep men from beating a path to your door.

But even the compatible roommate is a potential source of great danger. A roommate with a sense of humor and talent can make your suitor, the insurance broker, look awfully dull. A roommate with a lot of courage can make Mr. Shy Smith seem like a sissy. Avoid making possible beaux compete with this very companionable girl.

Living alone, if properly used, pays off in handsome dividends. Chief among them is the acquired skill and poise you'll bring to the running of your real home. The psychological effect of this experience will reinforce you the rest of your days. You'll be especially grateful in the valley periods of your life when all the world seems in cahoots to get you down. However, beyond a certain point, the law of diminishing returns begins to operate and you cease to get further benefits out of living alone. Specifically, we mean that living alone is just one of the roads that lead to Rome.

Agriculture Teachers Open Workshop Session at Md. U.

Some 40 teachers from Maryland, Delaware, West Virginia and New Jersey attended the opening session.

One of the main problems facing the teachers, Dr. H. F. Cotterman, dean of the faculty, told the group, is creating community spirit among students.

Too often, he declared, teachers develop an exceptional agricultural student only to see him turn to white collar work. Farm studies, he said, should give the student a vivid picture of the advantages of farming as a life work.

Other speakers on the program included Dr. Herbet Swanson, specialist in teacher training of the United States Office of Education; Dr. W. A. Smith, a teacher training expert of Cornell University, and Professsor Paul Hodgson, of the University of Delaware.

Dr. Arthur M. Ahalt, head of the university's department of agricultural education, is supervising the workshop, the fourth annual one for the four-State area.

Today's program will include committee reports, discussion groups and evaluation.

Last of Displaced Teachers Reassigned

Reassignment of the displaced teaching staff of Central High School has been completed, Norman J. Nelson, First Assistant Superintendent of Schools, announced yesterday.

The final assignments were the three physical education teachers who were sent to Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson and Eastern high schools.

The Video Icebox Needs Copperhead

By John Crosby

VARIETY'S current issue contains its annual salute to television, roughly 14 pages of complaints, criticisms, suggestions, predictions and assorted laments about TV contributed by the deep thinkers of the RCA Building and Hollywood. I hurriedly skip over the large-scale observations, which are too sweeping for my small-scale intellect, and pass along to some of the more minute perceptions.

Smith

H. Allen Smith, for example, reports that he has watched 3212 icebox doors open, only 3210 of which were subsequently closed. Two were left standing open. Mr. Smith suggests that they get a little suspense into it. When a door swings back, there should be some sort of surprise—a copperhead, poised for the kill, or Groucho Marx learing from behind a beer bottle.

This is such a fine suggestion I'm afraid it'll be adopted. Not the copperhead, though. There'll be four bottles of beer there, singing that old folk song, "Piels' Light Beer of Broadway Fame," at you. Then a can of Hunt's tomato sauce, doing a soft-shoe dance in the deepfreeze unit, will tell you what it does to a flounder. The possibilities are boundless.

Back to Beginning

SOME one score years ago, George Bernard Shaw used to complain that about two thirds of the average movie consisted of opening and closing bedroom doors. But the movies matured. The actors graduated from the boudoir and began opening and closing taxi doors, shouting, "Follow that cab."

Now, we are in the icebox door age, but already there are rumblings of change. The automobile door is getting the play. ("Notice the easy finger-tip action, the vibromatic swing of this fine, all-steel, hydroactive door, exclusive with the Plodgett.")

Another Variety essayist, Hal Kanter of Hollywood, scripted a little ode to television's unsung pioneers. Milton Berle, Mr. Kanter points out, is the first man—sing Hey Nonny, Nonny—to kiss his own hand in front of a television camera. Mr. Berle is also credited by Mr. Kanter with launching the "Check your brains and we'll start even" joke on TV, a notable first.

Scratching Technique

ANOTHER noted Hollywood scholar, Manny Mannheim, contributed easily the most exhaustive paper yet written on the subject of scratching and handshaking on TV. (Mannheim first won renown with his searching study of cigarette choreography on TV.) Ken Murray, Mr. Mannheim points out, is a top-of-the-head scratcher, an action that comes just before the straight line and just after Murray has flicked his cigar.

Whenever Ed Sullivan is momentarily at a loss (Mr. Mannheim continues), he scratches his right eyebrow. Sullivan, he notes, is a switch scratcher. Equally adept with either right or left hand, Milton Berle is another eyebrow scratcher, but a delicate one, just a flick of the finger. Berle is also a back-of-the-neck man. Bob Hope, a television novice, seems to be troubled in the same areas as Berle—back of the neck and the eyebrow—whereas Ed Wynn, the itchiest man on TV, is an all-over man. Close behind Wynn comes Abe Burrows, who scratches his forehead, top-of-the-head and back-of-the-neck.

Why Copy Boys Seldom Find Time to Fill Paste Pots

I delighted a delegation of copy boys by failing to answer this baseball question one day last week:

"How can a pitcher get credit for a no-hit regulation game without affecting the season batting averages of the opposing hitters?"

Their answer: "He can pitch a no-hitter in the opening game, when everybody's batting average is zero anyhow."

I gnashed my teeth and shooed them out, but 10 minutes later they were back with a complaint.

"Shirley Povich ruined our day. He not only answered the question, he suggested a lot of other possibilities we overlooked."

Povich's answer: The pitcher can walk the first man up in each inning and then get the side out with any combination of walks, sacrifices and men picked off base that you care to dream up.

THE SCIENTIST

Guy B. Epling of 5759 13th st. nw. tells me that his younger sister doesn't think much of some of her college boy dates. He says her complaint runs like this:

If he's a whiz in chemistry
Don't show that you're attracted
'Cause guys like that just shrug and say:
"You've chemically reacted."

MISCELLANY

Television executives, still struggling to break even after years of astronomical deficits in the industry, are concerned about the new trend of lengthening program schedules to rival those of radio . . . Paul Cotterell, vacationing in North Sydney, Nova Scotia, makes me happy with her report: "Delivery of our mail edition of The Washington Post is excellent," and then makes me gnash my teeth with the postscript: "We're sleeping under three blankets every night" . . . An almost identical message comes from Kay Rose, vacationing at 35 18th ave. ne., Portland, Oregon, who enclosed some Washington streetcar tokens for Children's Hospital . . . Kae Furneisen of 622 Westcott rd., Falls Church, Va., and Mrs. Mary Reinhart of 1903 N. Oak st., Arlington, Va., team up to point out that "'Caged' With Jean Parker" should have been "'Caged' With Eleanor Parker," which is just as bad, if not worse . . . Mathilde D. Wires Tapped On Phone of U. S. Senator

By Drew Pearson

The amazing fact has now developed that the Washington police tapped the wires of a U. S. Senator while they were working for private individuals on Government time.

Lieut Shimon

The Senator in question is the late Josiah Bailey of North Carolina, and his wires were tapped in the basement of the apartment house in which he lived on Q st., by the same police lieutenant, Joseph Shimon, who spied on the Argentine Ambassador and tapped the wires of Howard Hughes.

Lieutenant Shimon sat, with a pad of paper, in the basement of Senator Bailey's apartment house every evening fo rabout two weeks while the Pan American Airways controversy was hot, and scribbled notes on the Senator's conversation. He had run a wire from the apartment-house switchboard down to the little room in the basement.

Sometimes, when Bailey was not in a talkative mood and wasn't using his phone, the police lieutenant had a friend come and visit him in the apartment-house basement.

Who paid Lieutenant Shimon for this private-eye job is not known. It was not part of his regular police work, and Maj. Robert Barrett, chief of police, has emphatically opposed wire - tapping. He also transferred Shimon to an obscure precinct when he caught him wire-tapping, but thanks to intervention from higher-ups, Shimon is now back at one of the most important precincts in the city.

Previous Wire-Tapping

Shimon also tapped Howard Hughes' wires at the height of the controversy between Pan American Airways and Hughes' Trans-World Airlines. At that time, Senator Brewster of Maine, great friend of Pan American, was chairman of the Senate committee investigating Hughes. Furthermore, the police officers who helped Shimon tap Hughes' wire have mentioned Pan American Airways in one of their supplemental reports to the Justice Department.

It was also disclosed that Lieut. Shimon instructed the persons working for him especially to listen for any conversation regarding Trans-World Airlines and aviation.

In other words, a member of the District of Columbia police was tapping the wires of a private citizen, Hughes.

Meanwhile, Brewster was publicly grilling TWA's Hughes in a Senate investigation during which it developed that Brewster had previously urged Hughes to consolidate with Pan American. Hughes had vetoed the consolidation, and it looked as if the Senate probe was his punishment for refusal to agree.

Bailey's Role in Dispute

Senator Bailey's tapped wire fits right into this picture. The late Senator from North Carolina was chairman of the Interstate and Domestic Commerce Committee which passed on aviation policy. Brewster was a member of this committee, and had pushed the "chosen instrument" bill, a policy devised and urged on Congress by Pan American.

This bill would have eliminated competition between United States airlines overseas; would have picked one "chosen" line instead to handle all United States air traffic abroad. It was when this bill was under consideration that Senator Bailey's wires were tapped.

Bailey was opposed to Brewster's and Pan American's plan of a "chosen instrument." Instead, he stuck to the old principle of free American competition. Senator Brewster, who was trying to change his mind, once flew to Raleigh, N. C., in a special Pan American plane, to argue with Chairman Bailey, but he refused to budge.

Bill Was Defeated

Partly because of Bailey's opposition, Brewster's "chosen instrument" bill was defeated. But during the debate, it now develops that Senator Bailey was subjected to police-state eavesdropping by the police of a city which is supposed to be the exact opposite of Moscow.

And the police lieutenant who tapped Bailey's telephone now continues to hold a job on the police force, while the Justice Department has let the wire-tapping report gather dust for nine months.

Meanwhile, Senator Neely (D., W. Va.), chairman of the District of Columbia Committee, shies away from a probe of police wire-tapping.
